MRS. R. E. KOOZER ILL FROM STROKE

Mrs. Ralph E. Koozer, well-known resident of this city, was suddenly taken ill this morning and was reported this afternoon as being in a critical condition at the Sacred Heart hospital. Her illness prevented the attendance of Mr. Koozer at the funeral Saturday of his mother, Mrs. Hattie A. Koozer, at Milton-Freewater, Ore., where she passed away Thursday. Mrs. Ralph Koozer was suddenly stricken while down town this morning about 8:00 o'clock.

Dreamland Opens
 For Fall Season
 Dreamland hall, which has been completely redecorated and remodeled for the fall and winter season, will be the scene of two big Labor day dances, tomorrow and Monday nights, according to George Dayton.

Dreamland will be open on Wednesday and Saturday nights every week with George Dayton's orchestra playing the latest dance tunes.

Leaving for Coast Visit—Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Moad are leaving for Brookings to visit over Labor day with relatives.

BELGIUM MOURNS AT QUEEN'S BIER; FUNERAL TUESDAY

Royal Victim of Auto Crash
 Lies in Palace, As Nation Sorrowed — Capital Saddened.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Long lines of Belgians entered the royal palace in sorrow again today, paying their last homage to Queen Astrid, who was killed yesterday in an automobile accident in Switzerland.

It was 18 months ago that these same folk came to view the mortal remains of King Albert, who also died by accident.

Funeral services are to be held Tuesday, probably at 11 a. m., in the dead Queen Astrid came back to the capital to the muffled roll of drums and to the sound of bugles playing "Aux Champs"—the call usually sounded at funerals.

Flanked with white flowers and lighted by six large candles, the simple coffin was placed in the palace chapel (chappelle ardente).

The special train that bore the body from Switzerland as it drew into the downtown Gare du Nord station at 8:40 a. m. (2:40 E. S. T.) found a city in deep mourning.

Grieving crowds wept openly in the streets and behind their doors were draped with black crepe and shop windows were shuttered.

A deathlike hush fell over the crowd outside the station as the queen's body was lifted from the coach in which it made the overnight journey from Luterne.

Sobs from the bareheaded crowd broke the deep silence as attendants placed the casket in the motor hearse outside the somberly draped station and stepped back to await the start of the drive to the palace.

Then drums, hung with heavy black velvet, began the funeral roll, and the notes from the trumpets of a band of army buglers rang out strangely and sharply in the usually bustling square facing the station.

King Leopold left the train at Gare du Luxembourg, before it arrived at the downtown station, and drove to the palace in an automobile to await his queen's body.

Governmental and city dignitaries rode in six automobiles which moved behind the hearse as the sad procession to the palace began. Troops lined each side of the street as the cortege wound its way slowly up Boulevard du Jardin Botanique and turned into Rue Royale, which led straight to the gates of the palace.

Church bells tolled throughout the city. Hundreds of people who packed the sidewalks crossed themselves and whispered soft-voiced prayers as the body of the queen in a coffin covered with a wreath of roses passed along.

Tiny children clung to their mothers' hands, watching the mournful drama.

Queen Astrid's three children played gaily in a garden in one of the royal villas, unaware that their mother never would return to them.

King Leopold was sad eyed and fatigued from a troubled day and a sleepless night.

Before he left the train accompanied by his secretary, Baron Capelle, he bandaged his own injuries.

In the palace as he awaited the arrival of the cortege he sat with bowed head, surrounded by his favorite court officials.
