MAN MOUNTAIN OF WRESTLING FAME MEDFORD VISITOR

Man Mountain Dean, the kingpin of the wrestling world, was shuffling the streets of Medford in all his bewhiskered glory over the week-end. Talking over the wrestling game with Promoter Mack Lillard between the irritating advances of admirers, autograph seekers and interviewers. The famous exponent of the "falling tree" hold spent most of his time trying to satisfy curious Medfordites who wanted to take advantage of the opportunity of looking at the largest piece of wrestler in the world. He came here by airplane Saturday night for the express purpose, however, of visiting Frank C. Doremus of Big Boulder Orchard, whose father and Dean are good friends at Santa Barbara.

Air travel is decidedly nothing new to the 320-pound matman, for last week he broke the world record for air mileage among wrestlers when his total reached one million miles. He took the record from Ed "Strangler" Lewis, whose record was 800,000, also passing up the impressive flying marks set by Gus Sonnenberg and Joe Savoldi. While here Dean breakfasted with Promoter Lillard and tentatively agreed to sign up for a bout here before winter. If Dean should not appear, the Army could not possibly hold all the ticket buyers, as Dean has a habit of drawing great crowds. He had four straight sell-outs in the Olympic stadium at Los Angeles, with 15,000 people at each.

Dean announced that he may quit wrestling soon to go into pictures. He is signed to do a picture with Joe E. Brown and a series of Hal Roach comedies in the immediate future, but however successful on the screen, the Man Mountain can never eclipse the fame and fortune he has gained in the ring by flattening opponents via his earthshaking "broodjumps."

W. C. Fields Draws Crowds To Rialto

Box office records, set only last week by Joe E. Brown, were shattered yesterday at the Rialto theater, where W. C. Fields is being shown in "Man on the Flying Trapeze." Indicative of Medford's desire for comedy is the "belly laugh" variety capacity crowds—the largest the Rialto has ever had—thronged into the theater, matinee and evening, to set a new high for attendance figures. With his particular gift for comedy given full play, Fields kept the audience in constant merriment, carrying the picture from one hilarious situation into another, pausing only occasionally in his monkeyshines to all out the audience to catch its breath, and a moment later sending it off again into gales of laughter with the burlesque for which he has so definite a flair. The fact that Fields himself, under the name of Charles Bogie, was co-author with Sam Hardy, another able comedian—might have a great deal to do with the constant stream of gags and comedy situations that arise in the story. And, inasmuch as it deals in its entirety with "in-law" trouble, it strikes a very human note along with the comedy. Fields is the downtrodden, henpecked, submissive husband, persistently nagged by wife and mother-in-law, and just as consistently supported in his scrapes by daughter Mary Brian. But the day of reckoning finally comes and audiences share the delight in which the in-laws are told off.

Herbert Marshall In Craterian Role

All of the wit, subtlety and the delightful insights into character which made "Accent on Youth" a hit on Broadway these many months ago now on view at the Craterian theater, where Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall are starred in the film version of the play. At times frivolous and at other times tenderly sympathetic, "Accent on Youth" is a story of a man who has passed 40, but ferewell to love—and suddenly finds himself more manly in love than ever before in his life. Herbert Marshall is the man, a successful playwriter, who falls in love with his secretary. Although she reciprocates his feeling, he mistrusts himself. When Marshall learns that he is torn between himself and the young leading man in his play, he turns to helping the young man, Philip Reed, win her. Married to Reed, Miss Sidney finds her troubles just beginning. Reed is youthful, romantic—but dumb! And the longer she is with him the more she yearns for Marshall's comfort, understanding and mature charm. The break comes in the climax, when Miss Sidney flies back to Marshall, with her husband in close pursuit. And, in one of the most hilarious, crack-brained sequences in recent films, she manages to alienate her husband and force Marshall to admit his love.
