Ye Smudge Pot

The "OH Trust" is now charged with convincing in Anglo-Ethiopian war situation. Unless it can be shown the "Power Trust" put them up to it, this information will cause no hysteria in Oregon.

Eastern professors of economics have worked out a plan whereby all labor will be permitted to work one hour per day. This sounds fine, if it doesn't result in the providing of the same number of meals.

The first jar of home-canned peas has been thrown out, and killed 17 chickens.

A San Francisco policeman is charged with owing a great income tax on $100,000 allegedly extracted from vice spot proprietors.

The esteemed Oregonian editorially surmises, no photograph is so easily obtained for publication, as those of babies.

80 assaults with guns, bombs, and baseball bats occurred in the metropolis in a year, due to labor disputes. Good progress is being made in the Chicagofication of Portland.

No trace has been found of the pal of the California man, who was suspended by a mob, before his sentence could be suspended.

A resident of Newport, Ore., reports in a letter to the editor that his home paper reported 2500 people at a picnic, when all he could count, including the orator of the day, was 60 souls.

Malcolm Campbell, the British auto racer, went 304.311 miles per hour on the bed of an abandoned Utah field yesterday.

It Can't Be Done

THERE is something phoney about this alleged Anglo-American oil concession in Ethiopia. It is hard to believe there are any rich oil deposits in this section of darkest Africa.

The entire affair looks suspiciously like a rather belated effort on the part of Emperor Selassie, to give Italy the impression that if his country is invaded, America and England will immediately become involved.

If this is the case then the King of Kings is due for a rude awakening as far as the United States is concerned. For the spirit of neutrality, and the determination to not be involved in any more European quarrels, is so strong in this country.

Outside of actual invasion, or a casus belli, so extraordinary in its potency that it could transform public opinion in the United States, overnight, this country is going to war WITH NO ONE.

Public opinion in this country, is overwhelmingly in favor of Ethiopia in this impending conflict with Italy, and if war is actually declared, this sentiment will undoubtedly increase.

But the action has been taken. As far as the United States is concerned the die is cast. As has been previously stated in this column, America dotes on extremes, and from one extreme we have gone, bait, hook and sinker to another.

THIS reputed Anglo-American oil concession is too reminiscent of the propaganda used so effectively during the world war, to make much of a dent on public sentiment in this country.

The British promoter, who we suspect, persuaded the "King of Kings" to join with him in a "fast one", will have nothing but burnt fingers and some questionable contracts, in his strong box for his pains.

Uncle Sam was roped in by financial involvement once, but it will take at least one more generation, probably more, before he will be roped in again.

North Dakota's Example

CONCERNING the problem of a new state capitol building in Oregon, it is interesting to learn what North Dakota has done. The North Dakota experience closely parallels that of Oregon.

At a meeting of the state legislature in February 1931, a bill was adopted calling for the construction of a new one. It provided for a committee to select an architect and placed the maximum cost at $2,000,000.

AS an article in the Architectural Forum points out, the architects did not follow the traditional idea of what a state capitol building should be. They broke with the past entirely, abandoned the old fashioned dome and rotunda idea, and put up an edifice, the major portion of which was a 19-story "skyscraper."

The skyscraper idea made it possible to establish a state capitol centre, so to speak, on a relatively limited area of ground, and include all state departments under one roof.

Another interesting feature was the complete separation of the executive and legislative departments in a three story wing, so that it could be cut off completely when the legislature was not in session, thus reducing the expense of heat and janitor service.

We believe that when the matter of building Oregon's new capitol comes up before the legislature, the experience of North Dakota in this direction, can be studied with great interest and benefit to the state.

Communications

Soviet Russia Is Upheld: I have been quite interested in the various opinions that have been expressed in your paper concerning the recent notes that were exchanged with Soviet Russia. You state that we should not recognize Soviet Russia until the ground that Soviet Russia under the ruthless, Godless and destructive dictatorship of Stalin, did not and could not qualify as a friendly and a trustworthy nation.

Personal Health Service

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene not to disease diagnosis or treatment will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink.

ONE FOR THE OLD FOGIES TO LAUGH OFF: From the June issue of Clinical Medicine and Surgery: "Bach, of the rectal clinic, Massachusetts General Hospital, writes that since the clinic was organized in 1928, the number of hemorrhoidectomies (surgical excision of hemorrhoids) has steadily decreased.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—They still miss Charles Thorley along the avenue of avenues. He was a florist and first tradesman to paint the serene residential aura of the commerce. By strange fate, he seemed to resent Thorley. He provided the street's most spectacular spectacle.
