DAMAGE ACTION AGAINST FIREMEN CONTINUED WEEK

The damage suit of Robert Robinson, 25, against Roy Elliott, fire department chief, and Ed Knappe, fire truck driver, for $50,000 for injuries sustained in an accident that necessitated amputation of a leg, was continued by the court until next week, upon request of counsel for both sides. The case was set to start this morning.

Young Robinson, through his mother as guardian, charges Chief Elliott and Fireman Knappe with negligence and carelessness, resulting in the accident, and the defendants claim contributory negligence.

The plaintiff was at the corner of Main and Ivy streets during a fire in the Hotel Medford, about 9:13 p. m. August 3 last. In strutting near the corner, Robinson's leg was caught in the hose, injuring it so severely amputation was necessary. The plaintiff alleges the fire truck was driven at a high rate of speed in unrolling the hose.

In a second amended answer to the complaint filed yesterday, the defendants ask that the suit be dismissed without costs. It is contended that the plaintiff's contributory negligence consisted of not seeking a place of safety, and that the fire chief and fireman acted in an official capacity, in stringing the hose.

It is further cited in the answer that the plaintiff has accepted $1000 from the city of Medford, as settlement and full release from liability, and that the defendants, as agents of the city, are entitled to dismissal of the action.

VISITOR IN MEDFORD TALKED WITH ROGERS DURING ALASKA TRIP

Treasuring the experience of having talked with Will Rogers at Juneau, Alaska, a week before his tragic death, with Wiley Post, A. C. Black, whose business takes him to Alaska twice annually, was a Medford visitor today. He comes to this city regularly as a representative of Blumauer-Frank Drug Co.

While having lunch at a Juneau restaurant, Mr. Black was surprised to see the famous humorist come in and sit down beside him, falling into conversation as simply and unpretentiously as though he were dining at his club. When Mr. Black immediately recognized the humorist, Will rejoined, "You know who I am—who are you?" without the slightest affectation.

Rogers was very much interested in learning about the territory, and inquired about various sections of the land, according to Mr. Black. The columnist-actor seemed particularly anxious to learn of the success of the Matanuska colony project.

During his stay in Juneau, Mr. Black said Will was continuously followed upon him and his admirers, great numbers of people, mostly youngsters, who sought his autograph. Will would stop with his characteristic shy, broad grin and with the rain pouring down upon him and his admirers, grant autographs with an inevitable word of optimistic humor.

Everyone in Alaska was interested in Rogers' and Post's visit, because it was the finest kind of publicity for the country, and the honor of receiving the humorist and filer was deemed a great privilege by the residents. Mr. Black said, "The catastrophe of their death was felt perhaps more keenly in Alaska, he said, than in any other place, because nowhere had the inseparable pair been as instantly taken to heart."

Comment on the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

DIAMOND LAKE, whipped by the wind last night into a rest-pocked ocean, is this morning a mirror wherein Paul Bunyan might gaze and see himself faithfully reflected. Bailey and Thielsen stand forth from its calm surfaces as clearly as when looked upon directly.

One look, a little breakfast, and we're leaving. Too many tourists—especially women tourists in ill-fitting pants. We crave the solitude.

Besides, some wandering disciple of Walton reports that they're biting in Fish creek.

ROUNDING a bend in the Big Camas road, some 10 or 12 miles north of Diamond lake, three deer appear in the road—a doe and twin fawns. They're blacktails, but the doe is nearly as big as a mule deer. They gaze calmly while the car approaches within 50 yards, then trot off easily into the brush.

A little farther on a sign—"Mowich way." Mowich is Indian jargon for deer. The tracks of the doe and fawns are in the dust of the road for half a mile, and—believe it or not—they paused before the sign as if to read it.

Two hundred yards farther back is a camp, a little way off the road, and the tracks show that the doe and her youngsters turned up the side road leading to the camp, followed it to within 30 or 40 yards of the car and tables and people, looked the outfit over, then turned back and resumed their leisurely parade.

Even the deer are going tourist in this country.

WORD here in passing about the doe in his mahogany offices in Washington who decreed that the routes in the national forests of the great untamed West must hereafter be called "ways" instead of plain, simple under-standable roads and trails.

He probably carries a handkerchief in his cuff in the daytime and wears some silk pajamas when he goes to bed.

THREE hours later.

The disciple of Walton was mistaken, or at least misled. Fish creek is a typical fishing stream—everybody got his limit yesterday but they won't look at a thing today.

disregard "skepticism" and "those actuated by a spirit of political partisanship," but he believed it a "duty to clarify our purposes" to "criticize who are honest non-partisan and who are willing to discuss and to learn."

Business Answer
In San Francisco today, ready to sell on a world voyage, Howard said "Business now has the answer to the question it has been asking for months."

"I think the statement speaks for itself. The president states very unequivocally that the basic program of the new deal is now complete and that the promised 'breathing spell' is here."

"It is obvious business has but to interpret this as meaning the period of experimentation is past, and with the action of the last congress out of the way it can go forward."

"And it looks to me as if business can be counted upon now to go ahead and play ball."

Informing Howard that the "breathing spell" of which he spoke is here, the president stated:

"It is a source of great satisfaction that at this moment conditions are such as to offer further substantial and widespread recovery."

Unemployment Wanes
"Unemployment is still with us, but it is steadily diminishing and our efforts to meet its problems are unflagging."

Mr. Roosevelt declared the newly enacted tax program "is based upon a broad and just social and economic purpose."

He stated it "affects only those individual people who have incomes over $5,000 a year and individual estates of decedents who leave over $40,000" with adjustment of the corporation tax "to the generally accepted fact that larger corporations enjoying the advantages of size over small corporations possess relatively greater capacity to pay."

To the report of Mr. Howard that business men "are convinced and sincerely believe" that the administration has "side stepped broadening the tax" to the extent necessary to approximate the needs of the situation, the president replied:

"The broadening of our tax base in the past few years has been very real. What are known as consumers taxes, namely the invisible taxes paid by people in every walk of life, fall relatively much more heavily upon the poor man than on the rich man."

Consumers Taxes Up
"In 1929, consumers' taxes represented only 30 per cent of the national revenue. Today they are 60 per cent, and even with the passage of the recent tax bill the proportion of these consumers' taxes will drop only 5 per cent."

"This administration," he continued, "came into power pledged to a very considerable legislative program. It found the condition of the country such as to require drastic and far-reaching changes and necessity required us to move on a broad front for more than two years.

"It seemed to the congress and to me better to achieve these objectives as expeditiously as possible in order that not only business but the public generally might know those modifications in the conditions and rules of economic enterprise which were involved in the program."

Breathing Spell Here
"This basic program, however, has now reached substantial completion and the 'breathing spell' of which you speak is here—very decidedly so."

"I do not claim that government alone is responsible for these definitely better circumstances. But we all know the very great effect of the saving of banks, of farms, of homes, the building of public works, the providing of relief for the destitute, and many other direct governmental acts for the betterment of conditions."

"In the large," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, "the depression was the culmination of unhealthy, however innocent, arrangements in agriculture, in business and in finance."

"Our legislation was remedial, and as such, it would serve no purpose to mask a doctrinaire effort to distinguish between that which was addressed to recovery and that which was addressed to reform. The two in an effort toward sound and fundamental recovery, are inseparable."

"Our legislation was in conformity with the basic economic purposes which were set forth three years ago."

The party went by way of Jacksonville, Ruell and Murphy, returning by way of the Pacific Highway. Mr. Crawford was elected to the highest rank of colonel commander, of which he is very proud. Mrs. Sue Clayton, who nursed at Indianapolis during the Civil war, was the only war nurse there. There were only five old veterans there, as the ranks are fast diminishing.
