

ROTARY TOLD OF REVISED METHODS IN CRIMINAL LAW

A discussion of recent progress made in revision of criminal procedure, was the subject of an interesting address by District Attorney George Coddling at the luncheon meeting of the Medford Rotary club at the Hotel Medford today. Mr. Coddling outlined recent efforts to speed up court procedure and reduce cost to taxpayers of actions of this nature.

One of the recent improvements gives the defendant in criminal cases the privilege of appearing before the district attorney, eliminating grand jury indictments. He explained that this procedure had been followed here when a plea of guilty was assured, resulting in substantial savings in grand jury costs.

A recent change in the whole jury system, requires only a majority of ten out of twelve members for a verdict, except in the case of first degree murder. This plan eliminates jury deadlocks and means a material saving to taxpayers.

By special order, a reporter may now attend grand jury proceedings and the transcript of testimony tends to speed court proceedings. Among other revisions in law, which have been the effort of states to adopt uniform extradition laws and the permitting of a judge to comment upon testimony as followed in the federal and English courts. The elimination of the mere "misdeemeanor" charge in cases where the defendant has contributed to the delinquency of a minor is another important action, according to Coddling. County jail or penitentiary terms are now meted out in these cases.

"I am very much in favor of a law against convicts entering applications for pardons," Mr. Coddling said. Each time there is a change of administration, the newly elected governor is flooded with applications from inmates of the state penitentiary, consuming valuable time on the part of the chief executive, according to the speaker.

District Attorney Coddling concluded his talk with a brief outline of the highly developed finger-print method in crime detection, and a discussion of the controversial sterilization question. Mr. Coddling explained how the rights of persons involved are amply safeguarded in sterilization cases. Painstaking effort is being made by state and federal boards to simplify and improve the efficiency of criminal procedure, according to the speaker, who predicted that considerable progress will be made along this line within the next few years.

BULLETIN TELLS SPIDER MARKINGS

CORVALLIS—(Sp.)—The famous, or infamous, black widow spider closely resembles some of the common house spiders found in Oregon in general form, size and color, except for the colored markings usually found on the underside of the widow's abdomen, say entomologists of the Oregon State college experiment station in a circular entitled "The Black Widow Spider," recently published.

Because the colored markings are sometimes indistinct or lacking on the black widow, it is often confused with its harmless relative, the house spider, says the circular. The widow can be readily recognized, however, by the fact that its side or lateral eye are far apart while those of its near relatives almost touch each other, it is pointed out.

The circular, prepared by Dr. Don C. Mote, head of the entomology department, and Kenneth Grey, field assistant, gives pictures and a complete description of the black widow, with information on its habits and distribution. Copies of the publication—Station Circular 112—may be had upon request from the college at Corvallis or from county extension offices.
