

PINTO COLVIG HAS BEST IMITATIONS IN ALL HOLLYWOOD

Former Medford Man Takes Vocal Part in Disney Pictures — Barrymore and Beery Do Own Belching

By Lester Warner United Press Hollywood Correspondent HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 12.—(UP)—Pinto Colvig is Hollywood's least known but best imitator.

He is the voice of Pluto the Pup and other characters in "Mickey Mouse."

He's the head man in a group of 20 others who go through life making strange sounds.

It's almost a closed corporation. No others can gain admission for the purpose of hiccoughing, belching, imitating birds, crying babies, screaming grunting like a pig, belching like a horse or mooring like a cow.

Some Can't Belch Lionel Barrymore and Wallace Beery provide their own belches. But most of the others need assistance.

When off-scene hiccoughing was needed on the set of "The Milky Way," Harold Lloyd's latest picture, Ruby Ray was secured. Miss Ray sang last year with the Chicago Grand Opera Company.

She also is Hollywood's outstanding bird imitator and artistic whistler. Ruby supplied the sound of the brain fever bird in "Four Precious People."

Tommy Carr, radio performer, was brought into the action when a stutterer was needed in "It's a Great Life." Florence Ates commands too much money.

Duke York, the belching expert, gets up steam by drinking quantities warm soda pop.

Belcher Imitates Babies Eddie Lang is said to be Hollywood's best baby crier. They'd use a real baby if they were more dependent would permit. Claire Vincent is the leading screamer. She spares out her screaming duties by acting as stand-in for Frankie Langford.

Frances Gill is adept at children imitations. She did a "Crying Baby" in "The Night at the Night."

Inasmuch as Pinto Colvig works only for Walt Disney, Melvin Cline gets the call when more guttural harparded sounds are needed. Dorothy Lloyd does high pitched animal and Dorothy Williams is a leading frog imitator.

DEPRESSION PUTS CHANGE IN SAVING, SPENDING HABITS

Many Jolted Into More Reckless Outlook—Others Say Hard Times Taught Necessity Saving Money

By Halder Winget Associated Press Financial Writer NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The shock of depression has radically changed the saving and spending habits of the so-called typical adult American as measured in a survey by the magazine "Sales Management."

Slightly less than half of those covered in the survey had changed their attitude toward saving money. Slightly less than half of that group were jolted by the crash into a more reckless attitude toward life.

On the other hand, a little more than half of the entire group were shaken to the other side of the picture by the same economic maelstrom.

Those people the survey found declared the depression taught not a lesson in going to save against the next rainy day.

Such a change in the attitude of the people, "sales management" asserted, has brought about new marketing problems.

It was indicated in the survey, for example, that the percentage of plus money favored better home furnishings first, and then they wanted more recreation, travel, automobiles and education.

Indicated for motor cars, it was found, is bolstered by the fact that the survey found better home furnishings first, and then they wanted more recreation, travel, automobiles and education.
