Buck Jones Stars In Roxy Westerner

A wild ride on a runaway logging train, with the brakes out of commission; a plunge over a waterfall in a canoe; a fall down the shaft of an abandoned mine; a hair-raising journey locked in a building tumbling along in the torrent from a bursting dam; a desperate dive among the crushing timbers of a log jam.

These are only a few of the adventures which befall Buck Jones in the thrilling serial, "The Roaring West," the first episode of which will be seen at the Roxy theater tomorrow.

"The Roaring West" tells the story of a prolonged battle between cowboys and outlaws for the possession of valuable gold claims on the western frontier.

The cast appearing in support of Jones includes such well known players as Muriel Evans, Frank McGlynn, Sr., William Desmond, Harlan Knight and Walter Miller.

Will Rogers Film Pleases Audience At Two Theatres

A new record for opening day crowds was set yesterday with the opening of the much-heralded Will Rogers picture, "Steamboat Round the Bend."

With the facilities of both the Craterian and Holly theatres being used to insure plenty of seating capacity, both theatres were completely filled last night with every indication of even larger crowds for the next two nights, when the picture is unquestionably one of the best pictures Rogers ever made.

"Steamboat Round the Bend" is a warm in sentiment, rich in characterization, replete with thrills and human light. Rogers in a new and more human light.

As captain of the "Claremore Queen," a ramshackle old tub, Rogers is involved in the romance of Anne Shirley and John McGuire. Their happiness is threatened when McGuire kills a man in the girl's defense, giving himself up on Rogers' advice and is condemned.

Of course, the girl and Will Rogers blame each other for the boy's plight, but their desire to help him draws them together in a rich friendship. While they strive to earn enough money to pay for his appeal, Rogers is indulging in his old rivalry with crusty Irvin S. Cobb, captain of the ship.
