TULLY SENTENCED ON GIRLS CHARGE

SUBANVILLE, Calif., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Thomas A. Tully, 24, son of the author, Jim Tully, pleaded guilty today to a charge of assaulting a girl when arraigned before Superior Judge H. D. Burroughs. He was immediately sentenced to a term in San Quentin prison.

The sentence carries a term of 1 to 30 years imprisonment.

Young Tully was arrested eight days ago, on complaint of Juanita Sheppard, 16-year-old Westwood, Cal., girl, who alleged he beat and attacked her after a party.

When a group of men milled outside the Westwood jail, reportedly bent on lynching, young Tully was removed here for safe-keeping.

DANIEL SCHENCK TAKEN BY DEATH AT FAMILY HOME

Daniel Reeder Schenck, born at Rockville, Indiana, September 8, 1849, passed away September 23, 1935, at the family residence, 8 Mistielee street, Medford, at the age of 88 years. At an early age he moved to Iowa with his parents, later moving to Webster county, Neb. Mr. Schenck was united in marriage of Leona Brown, March 3, 1881, at Ambury, Neb. She preceded him in death, September 15, 1915. To the union five children were born, three of whom survive, two having passed away in infancy.

In 1910, he with his family moved to Scotts Bluff, Neb., where he served as police magistrate for 20 years, resigning that position on coming to Medford in 1930. He leaves to mourn his passing, two sons and one daughter, Loyd C. Schenck of Scottsbluff, Neb., A. Orin Schenck and Estella Schenck of Medford; also a brother, W. C. Schenck of Denver, Colo., and a sister, Mrs. Mary M. Billin of Preston, Kansas.

Mr. Schenck was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years, being a member of the First M. E. church of Medford at the time of his death. Funeral services will be conducted by Rev. Joseph E. Knotts at the First M. E. church at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Final rites and interment will be at Scottsbluff, Neb. The remains will be accompanied east by Miss Estella Schenck.

OLD GOLD MILL MAY HIDE MINE

PHOENIX, Ariz., (UP)—An old Spanish gold mill, presumably used by the Spanish conquistadores when they ranged the southwest in search of gold, has been discovered on a lonely ridge north of here.

The arrastra, as it was termed by the Spaniards, apparently was worked by forced Indian laborers, who trudged wearily around a circle, pulling a heavy beam which, in turn, dropped heavy boulders over the gold ore placed in a trough beneath them. The old mill was found by a prospector, Robert Dupuy. The arrastra, he said, was at the top of a pass known to have been used by the Spaniards and Indians 400 years ago.

Dupuy said he believed the Spaniards had a mine in the immediate vicinity of the arrastra, possibly pointed out to them by the Indians they later enslaved.

However, no traces of the mine were found, he said. He said it was possible the Spaniards had abandoned it and concealed evidence of its presence, or that the Indians, enraged at their treatment, had killed the white men and then concealed the mine to prevent its attracting other adventurers.

BIG SALMON DROWNS INDIAN FISHERMAN

THE DALLES, Ore., Sept. 24.—(UP)—George Thompson, 70-year-old Warm Springs Indian, was fishing at Celilo Falls with a dipnet yesterday when a huge salmon swam into the snare. The fish struck so hard that Thompson fell into the Columbia river and was drowned.

LOCO WEED POISON DUE TO TARTRATE

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UP)—What makes the loco weed drive livestock "loco," or crazy, has been determined by Dr. O. S. Fraps and E. C. Carlyle.

The two attaches of the Texas agricultural experiment station here have isolated the poisonous principal of the weed. They expect their experiments will help in combating the plant, which has caused untold havoc among herds. The work was carried on jointly with the Department of Agriculture.

Extracts from the loco weed, which abounds in the Rocky Mountain grazing region, Mexico and portions of Texas, were taken and separated chemically.

Portions of the extract were administered to livestock until the poison was isolated. The final extract was named locoine. It is a tartrate. Experiments showed that toxic effects on the horse is much more pro-

MINERS RETURNING TO RENEW SEARCH AROUND GOLD HILL

GOLD HILL, Sept. 24.—(Sp.)—Miners are returning to this section in increasing numbers in anticipation of a successful season of gold recovery.

Already dozens have established camp along the various creeks here and are now hard at work in completing preliminary clearing so that they will be able to start digging for the precious metal as soon as the streams begin flowing.

Many of the returned miners are familiar figures here, having mined along the creeks in past years. They quit early in summer when the brooks run dry and turn from mining to farming, working in the orchards and on the farms in the Rogue Valley.

The returning miners predict a long season of work here, having mined with sufficient water to carry them well into next summer. With a few more years of normal rainfall, they say, the creeks of the valley will flow the year around as they did up to a decade ago. It is their prediction that millions of dollars of gold will be taken from the ground in this locality this year.

THE GRANGE
