Medford district claims credit for having inaugurated such schools in the CCC.

Garbo Picture Coming to Craterian

A new Garbo picture is always an exceptional event on the screen horizon. Now the great Swedish actress makes her appearance as the heroine of Count Leo Tolstoy's immortal romance, "Anna Karenina," with a cast which includes Fredric March as co-star, Freddie Bartholomew of the memorable "David Copperfield," Maureen O'Sullivan, May Robson and Basil Rathbone. The new production comes to the Craterian theater as one of the brilliant events of the new movie season.

Rialto Friday

Gasps of terror and roars of comedy are blended together as a rich old man does out his millions to a greedy family in "One Frightened Night," playing at the Rialto theater tomorrow and Saturday, with an all-star cast.

When an eccentric old millionaire, played by Charley Grapewin, bequeaths five million dollars to his pretty grand-daughter, Mary Carlisle, his other friends and relatives are all suspected in the plot to murder her and get the fortune. After Evelyn Knapp is killed, the laughs and thrills assembly chase each other with a lightning swiftness, while Fred Kelsey and Adrian Morris, as a couple of country cops, tangle with Wallace Ford, a hilarious vaudeville magician, in finding the killer. Regis Toomey finally finds the key to the mystery and to Mary Carlisle's heart, as well. Others in the all-star cast include Arthur Hohl, Hedda Hopper and Lucien Littlefield.

"Black Sheep" with Edmund Lowe and Claire Trevor has its final showing tonight. Sidney and Robert McWade among others.

Will Rogers Film On Roxy's Program

Although "Judge Priest," starring Will Rogers in the story of a lovable Kentucky jurist who mixes human qualities with his decisions, was advertised not to be shown again in Medford, the Fox Film corporation was prevailed upon to release the picture for a special return showing, to allow the vast army of Rogers fans to again see their favorite. Accordingly, "Judge Priest" is being shown today and Friday only at the Roxy Theater.

not going to risk my money in sprucing up my business or expanding my plant if the government's going to turn socialist on me in the next year or so.

"The president's promise of a breathing spell did not mean much to me. That phrase, 'breathing spell,' sounded like he had some more fireworks in mind later on. What I would like to have is a good feeling that Washington has done all the socializing it is going to do and that I can plan ahead without fear that some brain trust is going to get a new idea for cracking down on me or ruining me, or that spending is going to continue until the government ruins itself and me."

Don't fall for rumors you may hear about impending radical farm uprisings, merely because a few farmers have been indicted around here for inciting revolt against government.

Edward Arnold Has Role Craterian Hit

"Diamond Jim" with Edward Arnold starred in the title role, opens at the Craterian theater today for a three-day engagement. Following the amazing career of James Buchanan Brady, whose glittering, gem-studded figure earned him the title of "Diamond Jim" Brady, the film portrays the gay '90s, the most colorful and romantic period of American history, and the man who did more than his share in making the gay '90s even gay.

"To make money—you've got to look like money," was Brady's philosophy, and thus started one of the greatest collections of jewels ever assembled on one man. Super-salesman, financier, tycoon—his parties, his lavish gifts, his enormous appetites are all shown in the picture. The supporting cast includes Jean Arthur, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, Eric Blore, Hugh O'Connell, George over in her grave every seven days. This state is as wet as a brewery vat, except on Sundays, when everything dries up. But across the river in the Kansas soil from which prohibition sprang (and where it is still cultivated) the law permits sale of beer any day on the assumption that it is non-intoxicating.

Thirty Misourians consequently find their oasis on the Sabbath in the center of national aridity.

News Behind The News

(Continued from Page One) new workhouse, a new federal post office, the newest and best air-cooled convention hall in the country. (The Republican convention should, and probably will, come here next year. Hotel accommodations have been expanded.) A new building bond issue of $40,000,000 has been put through. At least $100,000,000 will be spent (with the help of federal contributions) on the new program. All this, of course, will be concrete for Mr. Pendergast, which will further his friendly relations with Washington. Note—The law here requires contracts to be awarded to the "lowest and best" bidder. This is no obstacle to Mr. Pendergast. He and his friends are not always the "lowest" bidders, but are invariably "the best."

The street car motor man will tell you "the president is not as stout as he was" here. The business man will tell you that all business is politically fearful, but business is much better and the immediate outlook is bright. The strongest anti-Roosevelt people, however, privately rate him no worse than even today, but are hopeful that the trend away from him will continue. The plaint of the business men here is the same as throughout the middle west. In Chicago, Milwaukee or Kansas City, he will lean across his desk and tell you: "I am not against reform. Lord knows, we needed some. The social security legislation is all right with me. But what I want to know is: Where do we go from here? I am
