APPLIGATE CABIN, TALENT BARN IN PATH OF FLAMES

Three fires that consumed a barn, a cabin and a considerable amount of brush and small timber engaged the U. S. forest service and CCC detachments yesterday.

The first blaze occurred in the Appligate section at 7:30 a. m. It burned down a small cabin occupied by a ranch hand and employed on the E. R. Taylor farm at Jacksonville. The fire was caused presumably by an overheated flue.

A fire that threatened for a time to get beyond immediate control because of a strong wind, destroyed the Schuyler barn behind the Everett Eason ranch in Talent. A large amount of hay was also burned. The cause of the blaze, which started about 9 a. m., was not determined.

A brush fire yesterday afternoon burned some lodgepole pine near Huckleberry mountain, Union creek, before it was brought under control.

STATE'S BEAUTY FOUND INSPIRING

The scenic charm and agricultural productivity of Oregon impressed Mrs. E. C. Hamilton of Central Point so lucidly during a recent motor trip to the home of her sister in Irrigon that she recorded her impressions in a letter to her sister after her return.

"Go, scenery of Oregon, wherever I go, never fails to awaken awe and admiration in me," Mrs. Hamilton wrote.

The peaks of the Cascades were found to be possessed of majestic grandeur by Mrs. Hamilton while the deep gorges appeared to her as evidence of the ages through which the streams worked unceasingly to cut their channels.

The valleys were found by Mrs. Hamilton to be rich in agricultural produce, the wide expanse of productive farms testifying to the enviable position occupied by this state.
