

GENERAL WAR IN EUROPE UNLIKELY THINKS SENATOR

Pope of Idaho Returns From Tour With Word That the Italian-Ethiopian Conflict Will Be Localized

By R. H. Hippelheuser (Associated Press Staff Writer) NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(AP)—Sen. James P. Pope of Idaho, returning to the United States today on the Holland-America liner Volendam, after studying the crisis abroad at close hand, said he foresaw no likelihood of a European-wide conflict in the near future.

Powers Realizing

Over Europe, he said, there is a realization of the powers. "There is considerable discussion abroad of a drawing together of Mussolini and Hitler.

"There is nothing definite in these reports of an alliance on which to put a finger but you find this sentiment expressed everywhere."

Other powers, the senator said, "are discussing the danger of such an alliance and are considering the necessity of standing together."

The tall, portly senator said he heard no mention of a revival of the old Triple Entente, as such. However, he pointed to the mutual assistance pact recently negotiated by Paris and Moscow and to the "understanding" between France and England for collective action in the event of a European emergency.

Sanctions First Step

Dwelling on the Ethiopian crisis, the senator said the first step of the League of Nations and such of its protagonists as England and France would be "graduated sanctions."

"These could be at first the severance of diplomatic relations with Italy. Then there could follow boycotts and embargoes."

The imposition of a naval blockade to enforce these sanctions would create "serious frictions," Senator Pope added, "but I don't think it would reach a declaration of war."

"What do you base that belief on?" the senator was asked.

"Upon the feeling Mussolini isn't hurrying into war with Great Britain, especially when she's backed by all the other nations," he answered.

With the imposition of sanctions, Senator Pope said there is "a definite belief in Geneva Mussolini will withdraw from the League of Nations."

Favor Real Pressure

"There is a definite strengthening in Geneva of the determination to go through and exert real forceful pressure in this crisis," the senator said.

"There is a feeling that if Mussolini gets away with this, it will be a distinct precedent for haunting the authority of the league in the future."

"The general belief is that if the league does nothing now its authority will be so weakened as to be completely ineffectual in the future."

Senator Pope said he did not want to go so far as to say the league would collapse.

Senator Pope, referring to the question of American participation in any embargo imposed by the league on Italy, said:

"The reasonable thing to do would be to cooperate with this embargo by not shipping goods to Italy."

The senator remarking on the report from Washington that his visit abroad had any sort of official connection said the report was false.

BUILDING IN CITY TAKES BIG JUMP

Building permits in September took a sharp jump upward, as compared to the same period last year, it was shown today. Last year building permits for the month totaled $7,119, while this year they had leaped to $13,055. The uptrend is particularly encouraging in that four of the permits were for new residences, a type of building that has been almost at a standstill during the past few seasons.

The four residence permits were issued to H. E. Munter, $2,000; Ernest L. Scott, $2,500; Arthur C. Roworth, $400; and Mrs. M. E. Harper, $2,500. Repairs to residences also presented a hopeful sign, with permits for this purpose being granted to W. H. Primmer, $1,000; and Wm. Hammett, $1,000.

Will Hansen was yesterday granted a permit to repair the business building formerly occupied by the Bootery, at the corner of Main and Bartlett streets, at a cost of $2,500.

The first permit for October was granted this morning to J. D. Hooker, to repair the residence at 421 South Grape street, at a cost of $50.

OCTOBER COURT DOCKET SMALL

October term of circuit court is scheduled to open October 26, when a new grand jury list is impaneled.

Both criminal and civil dockets will be light, according to the district attorney's office. Less than a half dozen criminal cases are pending. The criminal calendar has been light the past three years. In a number of criminal actions the defendants have waived grand jury indictment and entered pleas of guilty and received sentences.

Circuit Judge Norton Tuesday consulted with attorneys relative to the setting of equity cases, to be heard by the court between now and the opening of the October term. Attorneys report that through the efforts of Judge Norton the equity and civil case dockets are in the best shape in many years, with pending litigation well cleared up.

U. S.-AIRWAY BEACON SERVICE OFFICE IS OPENED IN MEDFORD

The bureau of air commerce of the U. S. Department of Commerce has transferred its district office from Ashland to Medford and it is now located in the Barnum building on Front street near 5th. The office, moved here because Medford was considered a more convenient center, is in charge of Asa T. Fowler, airways mechanician.

It is Mr. Fowler's job to service and maintain all airway beacons between Dunsmuir, Cal., and Wolf Creek as well as the one government emergency landing field in the district which is located near Dunsmuir. Mr. Fowler's office is equipped with a shop and he also has an automobile which contains a mobile work shop. Mr. Fowler inspects all the beacons in his district once a month.

All the beacons, erected and maintained by the federal government, are operated by code so that a pilot can always find his bearing by sighting the lights, Mr. Fowler explained.

Mr. and Mrs. Fowler and their son took up residence here Monday at 113 Cottage avenue.
