Thrilling Drama On Rialto Bill

Barking guns, thundering hoofs and flashing flats bring dynamic action to the screen of the Rialto theatre tomorrow and Saturday, where Tim McCoy opens in the thrilling western drama "Riding Wild."

Fierce action, superb horsemanship, a clever and unusual story, excellent acting, outstanding photography and beautiful scenery lift this thrilling film far above ordinary. It is the story of the conflict between the large and small ranchers of the west, probably one of the most colorful chapters in American history. Range wars exploded with alarming results that seemed to overpower the forces of law and order. The rights to land caused the importation of hired gunmen and many were the bloody conflicts.

And, topping all their previous dances, the team of Astaire and Rogers this time introduce "The Piccolino" as one of the several intricate routines in which they have become such favorites of the country.

The supporting cast includes Edward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore among others.

ELKS CLUB DANCERS ENJOY M'ELROY BAND

Cole McElroy's music proved immensely popular with the large crowd which attended the Elks club dance last night. The dance was especially arranged to take advantage of the presence of the orchestra which is on its way back to Portland, following an extensive summer tour.

Popularity and fame of the orchestra drew between four and five hundred people to the Elks' temple, who received the efforts of the Portland musicians with enthusiasm.

Otto Frohnmayer and Sam Carey were in charge of arrangements for the dance.
