Proposed Site of Oregon's New State Capitol Building

This is one of the suggested sites for Oregon's new state Capitol. The Legislature will be called into special session soon to authorize construction of a new building to replace the statehouse destroyed by fire last April 25. This site is a combination of the present Capitol grounds, the Willamette University campus and a part of Wilson Park.

Here is a striking view of the old Oregon Capitol as the flames attacked its classic dome. It is proposed that the old Capitol grounds be made a sunken garden and the new building erected on the adjoining Willamette University campus and Wilson Park.

Bush's Pasture, famous acreage tract within the city limits of Salem, a portion of which will become home of Willamette University, in the event the Oregon Legislature accepts the present Willamette campus as part of the site of the new Capitol Building. Willamette's offer to surrender its present site is approved by university trustees and the city of Salem.

DESPERATE CONVICTS MAKE LIBERTY DASH AT ILLINOIS PRISON

MENARD, Ill., Oct. 12.—(UP)—Four desperate convicts including Basil (the Owl) Banghart, armed themselves with tailor's scissors today and made a daring break for liberty from the southern state Illinois penitentiary at Chester. They crashed through iron gates in a seven-ton commandeered truck and led 100 guards in a wild chase which lasted three hours before Banghart was shot down and two of his confederates were recaptured unhurt. The fourth was at large late today. Banghart, serving a 99-year term on conviction of participating in the John (Jack the Barber) Factor kidnaping, was a member of the notorious Roger Touhy gang. Those Banghart chose to aid him were: Cletus Stone, serving a term for armed robbery; Estell Franklin, serving time for murder, and Earl E.
