

GIANT AIR LINER FOR PACIFIC HOPS GETS FIRST TRIAL

Ultra Modern Ship Costing $400,000 Is One Of 3 Planned For China Route—Will Carry Forty-Three

By DAN ROGERS
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—(AP)—America's latest bid for world air supremacy, in form of the giant China clipper of the Pan-American Airways, was launched today when the ultra-modern $400,000 flying boat took off on a 6,000-mile cruise to San Francisco via the Panama canal.

The airplane, built for its long overnight service between California and Hawaii, was piloted by Captain Edwin C. Musick, chief pilot for Pan-American, who pioneered transport passage of the Pacific.

Three Ordered
The 51,000-pound high wing flying boat is one of three ships bought by Pan-American from the Glen H. Martin company of Baltimore for $1,300,000. Its departure followed a one-way visit during which airline officials approved it at a flying ing directors' meeting aboard the ship.

After a brief stop at Baltimore, the China clipper will visit the Caribbean, then Panama, thence will proceed up the Pacific coast to San Francisco, where a few days later flights will begin to Honolulu.

After a few round trips to Hawaii, the length of the China clipper's run will be extended over the entire 8,500-mile route to Shanghai. Passes have not been computed, but if they are in proportion to Pan-American rates over its South American routes, the tariff to Honolulu will be about $200 and the fare to Shanghai just under $1,000.

Accommodates 43
On daylight flights, the China clipper's hull will accommodate 43 passengers, a crew of seven and have space for a cargo of mail and express. At night, sleeping accommodations are provided for 18 passengers and crew members off duty.

The second of the China clippers will be delivered by the Martin plant within two weeks and the third will be ready for service shortly afterward.

Captain Musick, veteran of the Pacific crossing, is in command of the Pan-American clipper which shuttled back and forth over the route while air bases were being built on mid-Pacific islands, as prosaic as a milk train.

He will command the ship on its present long shakedown cruise and after it goes into regular Pacific service.

HISTORIC HOTEL BURNS IN TACOMA

TACOMA, Oct. 17.—(AP)—The historic Hotel Tacoma, one of the most famous hostels on the Pacific coast, was completely destroyed by fire this morning.

At least four persons were overcome by smoke.

Lieut. C. Smiley, Lieut. Stewart Lemm and Driver G. J. Letterman of the fire department were overcome while in the building combating the flames.

The loss was estimated at about $300,000, covering the building and furnishings.

The hotel, built during the roaring railroad boom days of the early '80s, was designed by one of America's most celebrated architects, Stanford White, who later was shot by Harry K. Thaw in one of the nation's most notorious cases.

Fire broke out about 6:15 this morning in the cabinet shop in the north end of the basement.

STUDENTS TAUGHT ABOUT FAR NORTH BY SCOTTY ALLAN

Students of the senior and junior high schools today were discussing the colorful tales of the north related yesterday by Allan A. Allan, better known as Scotty Allan, the Alaskan soursucker who is known the world over as an Arctic adventurer and authority on huskies, those rugged dogs of the far north.

Scotty Allan, Alaskan soursucker, yesterday addressed the junior high school students yesterday morning and the senior assemblage yesterday afternoon, sandwiching in a radio broadcast between the two talks.

He showed the students a team of his famous huskies harnessed to an Alaskan sled, explained how the dogs work and described the life of the Eskimos.

Shows Eight Huskies
The five dogs attached to the sled, he told the students, could do the work of a horse, only their stamina was greater as they could continue for miles after a horse had become exhausted.

Scotty, who is making a speaking tour through the west, had eight huskies with him, five of them being harnessed to the sled to demonstrate how they are teamed.

Scotty told of his experiences in the world war when he took 440 huskies to France to haul ammunition in the mountainous regions where neither horse nor tractor could penetrate.

"In their natural state the Eskimos are a splendid race," Scotty said, "simple, hospitable, kind and honest. They will share their last fish with a hungry traveler but they expect to be treated with similar generosity when they are in need. They always remember a good deed, nor do they ever forget or forgive a bad one. If they are cheated by a white man, they will not rest until they have inflicted revenge. And they usually get their revenge, even after the lapse of many years."

Joins Gold Rush
Scotty Allan came to this country from Scotland in 1887 when he brought a boatload of horses to the Dakota territory. In the same year he went to the Arctic to trap furbearing animals for the Hudson Bay company and thus obtained his first experience in the far north.

Ten years later the famous gold strike took him to the Yukon where he soon gave up mining to take up teaming as the income from transporting provisions was "more certain than panning for the yellow metal."

Scotty left yesterday afternoon in his big red car for Eugene where he was to continue his lectures.

G.O.P. Wins Senate In Massachusetts

ultimate effect will be to make the commission excessively cautious of any favoritism for Elliott's stations, and perhaps exceedingly favorable to his direct competitors.

The secret worry of the new dealers right now is not politics, but prices.

Their economists have worked up some private reports indicating that prices may be expected to advance strongly in the near future; the cost of living may be increased out of proportion to the current national income. That would mean plenty of trouble, because wage increases always lag behind price increases to a point where real hardships would fall on the bulk of the voters in the great middle classes.

The most conservative inner estimate is that the price level, now around 81, will increase to 85 or 90 as a general average for next year. The outside guess is 100 (the 1928 level).

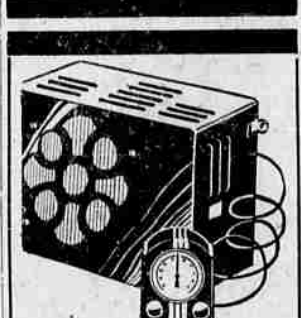

No one here has any direct information regarding Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's secret conferences with the French finance minister and the head of the Bank of France. But every treasury insider will bet 100 to one he is trying to find some way to stop the importations of gold, which are doing as much to bring on a price inflation as anything else. He is supposed to have cabled the department here for latest data on that subject before going to Paris.

Stabilization is generally considered here to be out of the question.

What set the new dealers off on their latest inflation price fretting is a report that the banking industry has been planning a general national increase in bread prices.

The cost of wheat and shortening is said to be responsible.
An inside inquiry into that price situation already has been started quietly by the AAA to see how much of an increase is justified, if any.

An ambitious young Democrat here figured out what he thought was a great idea. He would write to all Democratic state chairmen soliciting their opinion as to whether Mr. Roosevelt would win their state delegations to the next national convention. Naturally he thought all would reply with glowing assurances. These could be published. It would make a good publicity stunt.

The first ten or twelve replies he received were perfect for his purpose. But the last half dozen or so have been entirely unsuitable. The state chairmen grumbled about spots in their local organizations. Some complained about lack of cooperation from Washington. One pessimistic chairman in a north central state wrote that his state political lines were cut up so badly that he did not know what kind of delegation would be elected in the primary.

They ruined the symposium. It will not be published.

One of the best new deal publicity bureaus has the following motto typewritten on the wall as a perpetual reminder to the staff: "The kind of writing that takes cognizance of the fact that people have more emotion than logic, more sympathy than subtlety, more inertia than intellect, is the kind of writing that is understood."
