VENUS NOW LIKE GREAT ARC LIGHT
Those who go to bed late or get up early may now see the morning star, Venus, in all its clarity and brilliance between 3 and 6 a. m. As seen across the city it hangs like a great arc light in the eastern sky, making the electric bulbs of the reservoir seem pale and dull.
The star seems now between 30 and 40 degrees ahead of the sun on its way toward the western horizon and is quite plainly visible all day. To find it during the day one should stand in the shade. Once it is found, however, it can be seen merely by shading one's eyes.
Periodically stars and planets can be seen by day but this is sufficiently rare to arouse the enthusiasm of those who like to study the heavens.

Jail attaches said Mooney would remain here until the hearing reconvenes in San Francisco a week from Monday.

FREE COURSE IN AVIATION MAPPED FOR THIS COUNTY
Two free courses in aviation are being mapped out by the Oregon state board of aeronautics and one will soon be available in Medford, it was revealed at a meeting of the board yesterday at the Jackson county Chamber of Commerce.
Arrangements for the first course have been completed and final approval is now being awaited with expectation that classes can be started by November 1, the meeting was told by Allan D. Greenwood, inspector of the state board.
The first course is a ground school financed by WPA funds. Mr. Greenwood explained. It will be given at first in 20 cities in the local schools under the supervision of the state superintendent of schools, he related. Two classes of two hours' duration will be held weekly, with no charge excepting the cost of the textbook.
There will be classes in Medford, Grants Pass, Ashland and Klamath Falls, Mr. Greenwood stated. It will be a comprehensive course at the end of which students will be able to qualify for further study in registered schools of aviation, he said. A certificate will be awarded students completing the course, which will extend over a year, he related. There will be no limit to the number of students to take the course. The Tex Rankin textbook will be used.
The other courses embrace vocational training under the supervision of O. D. Thomas, director of vocational education. Mr. Greenwood said. A class is now being started in Portland, he stated, and other cities desiring the course must first obtain the approval of the local school superintendent and install a workshop at their airports. Mr. Greenwood added that the Medford airport needs a workshop anyway and suggested that this feature be added without delay so that Medford youths might benefit from the course.
It will be a complete course in aeronautics mechanics, free to 30 of the most deserving young men in any one city, Mr. Greenwood explained. There are now 50 airports in Oregon, only five of which are finished or completely equipped, Mr. Greenwood said. He added that Medford is one of the five cities having a completed airport.
Members of the state board present yesterday included Ted Gillenwaters of Klamath Falls who acted as chairman in the absence of Tex Rankin who was in the east; Dr. Raymond R. Staub, Mr. Greenwood, A. W. Whitaker, William H. Turner and Webster A. Jones, secretary, all of Portland.
Mr. Gillenwaters explained that the purpose of the aeronautics board is to learn the needs of aviation in the state and to make recommendations in accordance with its findings. The board, he pointed out, has no authority to allocate funds or promote projects. It is the board's aim to induce cities to realize their responsibilities in developing aviation in the state, he asserted.
"The state program of airports and airports is haphazard," Mr. Gillenwaters said. "Medford is ahead of any city of comparable size."
Mr. Greenwood asserted that $115,000,000 is available for airport de-

GRAFT HINTED IN BRIDGE CONTRACT
SACRAMENTO, Oct. 19.—(UP)—An investigation prompted by disclosures of shortages in the state treasury department today spread to other departments as reports of alleged graft in connection with the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge were brought to the attention of a special investigation committee.
Assemblyman Leon M. Donihue, of Oakland, chairman of the legislative audit committee, said he would inquire into reports that graft was involved in the expenditure of $850,000 preliminary to the start of bay bridge construction.
The meeting lasted for three hours and was declared by chamber of commerce officials to be the most spirited and important public conference held here in recent months.

NEW RESERVOIR FACTS
Presented so the citizens of Medford, having the facts, will be in a position to decide whether the proposed new reservoir is a vital safeguard to the water system and whether it should be constructed at this time.

(1) Medford's 4,000,000 gallon reservoir storage equals a one-half day of maximum consumption.
(2) The peak load of the 1935 season occurred at 7:00 P. M. on August 12, when the water consumption was at the rate of 13,850,000 gallons per day. This heavy draft of water was of about an hour's duration. Total amount of water used on this day equaled 8,850,000 gallons. An uninterrupted stream of water through the pipe line from Big Butte Springs made this supply possible.
(3) In June, 1930, a fracture developed in a 6-inch blowoff elbow on the Big Butte Springs Pipe Line, causing it to break. In order to make repairs and prevent further damage, the Big Butte Springs supply line had to be shut off. Six hours later when the repairs had been completed and the water turned back in, only four feet of water remained in the reservoir. Two hours later the Fir-Pine Lumber Company caught fire and burned.
(4) Had this fairly simple repair taken longer to complete or had the accident occurred in a relatively inaccessible section, the loss to Medford might have been devastating.
(5) The Water Commission, realizing the deficiency in the present reservoir supply, have maintained the old 16-inch wood pipe line from Fish Lake as a standby to be used in case of an emergency.
(6) This old Fish Lake Line has deteriorated to such an extent that it would practically have to be rebuilt to be of service.
(7) The old Fish Lake line will have to be abandoned this year.
(8) The Oregon Fire Insurance rating bureau have considered this old line as an auxiliary system, one of the reasons for the Medford Water Department's excellent rating.
(9) Abandonment of the old line without additional reservoir storage will increase the fire insurance rates of mercantile buildings and contents 4%.
(10) Building the new reservoir is the equivalent of renewing an insurance policy on the City of Medford.
