

STEINER PRAISES NEW NEUTRALITY IN ADDRESS TO P.-T. A.

mitted sales of implements of war and munitions to belligerent nations. This sort of neutrality means merely that we would take no part in the conflict and would sell to both warring nations without discrimination. Thus we might extend credit to both and by this means aid in prolonging the struggle and increase the profits of American munitions makers.

Means Trade Losses
"The new theory of neutrality would require that we withhold munitions and war supplies from both contestants. The formula may result, and probably will result, in trade losses. It denies profits to certain of our people. This denial is to the few and for the benefit of the many."

"At least we have learned that war profits are not always realized, and even if realization is had, the profit in blood money is not enough to justify the risk of becoming involved in the war. The world war taught us this, to our sorrow. We shipped munitions on ships of belligerent nations, we permitted American citizens to take passage on the same ships, and when the ships were destroyed and our citizens killed, we found ourselves on the brink of abyss. Nothing is surer than the conclusion that the old formula failed. Instead of bringing us security, it directly brought us into the war."

"I do not advocate unnecessary isolation, nor do I favor loss of profitable trade, but I do say that war profits are not worth the risk, and if temporary trade loss is the price of peace and security, we had better sustain the loss and keep our American boys off foreign battle fields."

In conclusion the speaker declared: "America cannot deny the complexity and the importance of its international relationships. Nor can we ignore the possibility that these relationships may, in one way or another, involve us in controversies between warring nations. But we can examine anew the policies of our government and determine whether they will in probability increase or decrease the hazards of participation. We have by the Kellogg pact renounced war as a policy, and now by the neutrality resolutions of the last congress, we renounce the profits of war in an effort to eliminate greed from our policy."

MORE FACTORY SMOKE NEED OF PORTLAND IS MAYOR CARSON'S VIEW

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 25.—(AP)—Municipal Judge Donald E. Long had under advisement today the case of irate residents complaining that their property is damaged by soot and smoke from the Doernbecher Manufacturing company.

Several residents of the area testified to damage, while others said they suffered none. Harry A. Green, plant manager, claimed the company has spent $81,000 since 1928 in efforts to eliminate smoke hazard. He said the company would not spend another dollar for the purpose unless the contractor could guarantee results.

Appearing in behalf of the company, former Mayor George L. Baker opened with: "I have been attempting lately to create more smoke hazards and payrolls. For the last 30 years I have heard discussions on this same topic, yet believe what we need is not rigid enforcement of city ordinances, for if we did there would be no business."

ENGLAND TRIES RURAL PROJECT IN FARM TEST

LONDON.—(UP)—A pioneer experiment in rural reconstruction is taking place round a manor near Totnes, which traces its history far back beyond Domesday Book.

The subject of the experiment at Darlington Hall, which is being conducted by L. L. Elmhirst, is to prove that an English country estate can be economically developed through intensive agriculture and the establishment of utilization industries.

When Elmhirst took over the manor eight years ago, it employed only 10 men. Today the payroll for the home block of 1200 acres has risen to 300, and the total, including associated undertakings, is approximately 1000. To the original mixed farm there have been added an extensive dairy farm, a poultry farm and a hog farm. Fruit orchards have been planted and a large cider mill has been built. The manufacture of rustic and modern furniture is undertaken. Laboratory help has been available at every stage.

Each of the farm undertakings was planned on the basis that five years should be allowed for the discovery of the best lines of development, and a further five years for commercial establishment. With more than two years to run, there is good hope that the original schedule will in most cases be realized.

Complementary to the economic experiments, Darlington is also the headquarters of a ballet school and the home of a flourishing co-educational school.

On Monday he will address the Men's Luncheon group, noon. The remainder of the week he will speak at 2:30 p. m. daily. Friends and the general public are cordially invited to attend.

RUINS MAY HIDE KING SOLOMON'S FABULOUS MINES

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa.—(UP)—The secrets of mysterious Zimbabwe, the ruined relics of a dead civilization which for years have puzzled archaeologists, at last are to be probed by a scientific expedition, which will have the support of the Rhodesian government.

Prof. Raymond Dart, the anthropologist and discoverer of the Taung skull, who knows the ruins well, believes their secrets will be revealed. The Zimbabwe remains of great buildings which lie near Victoria, Mashonaland, for half a century have been the center of scientific controversy, both as to their age and their original purpose. They are believed by many to be the legendary mines of King Solomon, while others suppose they were fortresses attached to a great trading center dealing in the products of the neighboring gold mines.

Since its discovery by Adam Reinders in 1868, there have been a number of small explorations on the site, but nothing decisive ever has come from them. The new expedition, designed on a large scale, will penetrate further into the mystery than hitherto.

Usually Hoffman eats them raw. But the last time he decided to steam them. When he opened one of the clams, to his astonishment, Hoffman found a large, perfect tear-drop pearl. An appraiser said the pearl would have been worth $450—if it hadn't and ruined its luster. Now, it's just been steamed. The heat cracked it another pearl.

Activities of Legion Auxiliary

It is a rare privilege to be a part of the American Legion Auxiliary. Membership offers opportunity for service which is available to only a small part of American womanhood—an opportunity to minister to those who came back battered and desolate, from the terrible holocaust of the World War; an opportunity for power, through large membership, to help our disabled in some small measure to forget the destruction and bitterness engendered, and find a semblance of peace and comfort at last.

The local auxiliary unit furnishes the Medford Mail Tribune daily to both veterans' hospitals, Roseburg and Portland, so that inmates from near Medford may hear local news. We also furnish magazines to the Roseburg hospital. Besides this each month we are notified of articles needed in the hospital, such as tray cloths, pneumonia jackets, hot water bottle covers and such things that are not furnished by the government but are needed in large quantities.

These things take money. When you belong to the auxiliary your dues help to supply these much needed articles; besides, at Christmas and Easter, money for holiday cheer is sent the hospital chairman of the state with which she buys the veterans (whether Legionnaires or not) some small token for the holiday. These are individual tokens and give them a great deal of pleasure.

If you have not sent in your dues, please do so or notify the membership chairman and she will call for them. Please mail dues to the secretary, Mrs. Belva Aiken, 19 Hoas Court, Medford.

OLIVE BEBEKAH LODGE will hold a Hummage and Cooked-food sale at the Spartz Building, Oct. 25 and 26.

PLAN TO BUILD HOME OF 2 STREET CARS IS FOUND IN DREAM

MADISON, Wis.—(UP)—A dream while he slept inspired Raymond P. Burt, University of Wisconsin engineering graduate to build a home from two discarded street cars purchased for $20 each, he asserts.

He placed them parallel to each other about 14 feet apart, joining them at the rear with a frame structure. The car on the right was made into a living room and dinette. A kitchen and bath were installed in the connecting frame unit, while the left car was designed for a bedroom and den. The basement plan included a garage under the left car and a recreation room under the right.

He wasted little, using the car aluminum boxes for medicine cabinets, and saving the headlights to place over ping-pong tables.

Most of the home, including the lot was estimated at about $200.

Several other families followed his example, relieving the street railway company of cars replaced by buses.

FOODCASTS

Creamed soup becomes irresistible when a sprinkling of finely grated American cheese is dusted on top just before taking the dish to the table.

Ever hear that the walnut was called by the ancients "Jupiter's Nut"? And to add to its romance, the walnut abounds in such glamorous lands as Persia, Lebanon, Asia Minor and all along the Hindu Koosh.

By the way, if you find your walnut kernels have shriveled, it's a good idea to soak them for a few hours in warmed milk.

Tea-by-the-fire is a nice institution these autumn afternoons and here's a way to make your tea especially pungent and refreshing. Simply brew a few whole cloves and a piece of stick cinnamon with a quart of tea.

Every family should eat some form of wheat every day, and the ingenious housewife will find delicious variations of wheat. Here, for instance, is an appetizing way to serve Rippled Wheat, the full-of-flavor new breakfast food, at dinner:

RIPPLED WHEAT APRICOT PUDDING
2 cups cooked dried apricots (drained)
12 Rippled Wheat Biscuits
1 cup apricot juice
1 cup sugar (light brown or granulated)
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 1/2 tablespoons butter
Put cooked apricots in well-buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with one-half of the sugar and crumble Rippled Wheat Biscuit over this. Pour in apricot juice and top with remaining sugar and cinnamon. Dot with butter. Cover and bake in moderate oven (300° F.) for 25 minutes. Uncover and brown. Serve hot or cold. Whipped cream or a hot sauce improves this pudding. Serves 6 to 8. All measurements standard.
