

PORTLAND CRITIC DRAWS HOT SHOT ON GRID ACTION

Mao Principal Says State Championship Situation
None of Junior Chamber of Commerce Business

MILTON-FREEWATER, Ore., Nov. 15.—(AP)—Answering a Portland junior chamber of commerce critic who intimated that McLoughlin high might have been invited to play in Portland Thanksgiving day for the mythical state championship, had Principal Dean Lobough of Pendleton kept still. Principal James Burgess of Mac-Hi today freely criticized the Portland interscholastic league.

"When Lobough suggested that all undefeated up-state teams stay out of a mythical state championship game in Portland until adequate financial arrangements could be made with the Portland league, we agreed perfectly with him. But of course Portland must understand that we are still running our own business in the east end of Umatilla county without the aid of Pendleton," the Mac-Hi principal declared.

Where Does C.C. Come In?
"I cannot understand why the Portland league felt free to call in the junior chamber of commerce to select a team for a Thanksgiving day game. Surely it is up to the state high school athletic association, of which we and all of the Portland teams are members, to work out some means of matching district champions for a mythical state championship. But it most certainly is none of the junior chamber's business."

"Of course, we can see that the junior chamber's selection of Spokane to meet Washington high was a fine 'out' for the Portland league, which had its toes stepped upon by the up-state teams and wanted some means of petty spite."

Medford and Mac-Hi, both undefeated, probably will meet this fall. We believe the winner of that game will be a much better mythical state champion than any team Portland can offer. After all, Portland's league winner represents such a small part of the state. If the Portland team

CURRIER HELD ON CHARGE OF KILLING DOG OF NEIGHBOR

George Currier of the Carberry district in the Upper Applegate area, charged with the crime of "malicious and wanton injury to personal property," was ordered held to await the action of the grand jury, following a preliminary hearing in justice court yesterday. Currier was permitted to go on his own recognizance.

Currier was specifically charged with shooting and killing a dog belonging to Read Masters, a neighbor. Currier claimed in defense that the dog had attacked and followed him in a menacing manner and that he had warned Masters to "call off the dog."

Arraignment of Mrs. H. C. Henry, 74, residents of the upper Sams Valley section, charged in a complaint with larceny of a 30-30 rifle and a Kelly hand-axe, of the value of $18.75 was continued, until a later date, in justice court this morning.

The complaint was sworn to by H. L. McNeice, a neighbor. Mrs. Henry promised the court, "on my word of honor" she would appear as soon as a quantity of wood, she and her half-brother are interested in had been hauled to a point where it could be offered for sale.

The district attorney's office states the case is involved, and has a number of angles.

GRANGERS ADVISED TO CO-OPERATE FOR RURAL ELECTRICITY

Convention Told Government Cannot Build Lines for Single Farms — Cooperative Groups Required

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 15.—(AP)—The necessity for community enterprise in the development of rural electrification was stressed before the National Grange today by Boyd Fisher, personal assistant to the rural electrification administration.

Fisher, discussing the practical questions involved in bringing electricity to the farmer through the $100,000,000 funds set up by congress, told the Grange convention that it is "a communal matter."

"The government may lend money for many other programs of the farmers on an individual basis but electricity cannot be served in that fashion," Fisher said. "We can't build a line for a single farmer."

He said that while the administration will lend money to private companies for the development of rural electrification "as a matter of preference we want to aid the co-operative efforts of the farmer."

Formation of co-operative organizations of farmers to take advantage of the opportunity of building electrical systems with government aid "cannot be competitive," Mr. Fisher warned.
He said that on the average the cost of building such systems would be $1000 a mile and told the delegates that considerable savings over the cost of operating private generating systems could be expected.

had the legislature so voted. The purpose of the measure was eliminated when the legislature voted to construct the building on the old site.

Major Bills Wait
The many bills signed during the morning did not include any of the so-called major proposals. The list included:

Authorizing purchase of property for wharves and docks by ports under right of eminent domain to be used for industries.

Elimination of so-called public utilities from jurisdiction of the public utilities commissioner when they do not directly deal with transmission of electrical energy.

Bill affecting the pilchard industry by permitting transfer of percentage of license fees from the fish commission to the port for wharfage construction.

Authorizing port district to acquire land for aviation purposes.

Removing the exemption of grade A milk producer-distributor from pooling under provisions of milk control law.

To prohibit wading or bathing in any irrigation canal used for supplying water for household purposes.

Authorizing county courts to appropriate money for construction and maintenance of pioneer monuments and memorials.

Appropriation of about $97,000 to the utilities commissioner for enforcement of motor transportation act.

Increase fee on butterfat under milk control law from quarter cent a pound to half cent.

Medford Farm Fund Signed
Appropriation of $6000 for maintenance of the Medford branch of the state experimental station.

Appropriation of $3800 for the Oregon Humane society.

VOORHEIS NAMED VICE-PRESIDENT HORTICULTURISTS

CORVALLIS, Ore., Nov. 15.—(AP)—The Oregon State Horticulture society, in session here today, endorsed the new state agriculture marketing agreement. No debate preceded the vote.

The delegates, who opened their meeting yesterday, elected E. J. Chastain of Milton, president. Others elected were Gordon Voorheis, Medford, vice-president; Dan Pierson of Hood River, second vice-president, and Truman Chase of Eugene, third vice-president.

O. T. McWhorter of Oregon State college was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Howard Merriam of Goshen was re-elected a director.

E. L. Potter, Oregon State college agriculturist, told the group that western Oregon agriculture is lending toward greater intensification, particularly since the advent of irrigation.

Several delegates suggested that group membership be given through co-operative canneries to attract more growers to the horticultural organization.

Growers should consult irrigation experts before installing irrigation systems, advised Arthur King, O. S. C. soil specialist, who outlined irrigation methods.

Agricultural development would be hastened, President George W. Peavey of Oregon State college said, if group endeavor prevails over "rugged individualism."

The group praised the late J. O. Holt of Eugene, former president, and Mr. Matteson, who bought the place formerly owned by Mr. Packard, has accepted employment in Arizona for the winter. Mrs. Matteson is living in Medford while he is absent.

We are sorry to say that John Wolcott, who broke his leg two weeks ago, is getting weaker and is in a serious condition. Mr. Wolcott is at the Sacred Heart hospital in Medford.

Mr. B. Roberts, who has been quite ill, is improving rapidly.
