Jean Parker and Robert Taylor, starred in "Murder in the Fleet," come to the Roxy theater today and Friday. The story deals with mysterious murders on a warship during maneuvers.

Ted Healy, Una Merkel, Nat Pendleton, Jean Heffbold, Frank Shields and the United States Navy are all in this picture of many thrills.

Will Rogers' Last Film Starts Today

Starting today, Medford has its last chance to see one of the country's most beloved stars in a picture that ideally expresses his philosophy of life.

The star, of course, is Will Rogers, whose last picture, "In Old Kentucky," starts a three-day run at the Craterian theater today—showing for both matinee and evening and, to allow everyone a chance to see the loved humorist in his last picture, "In Old Kentucky" is being shown during the next three days for evening shows only at the Holly theater.

Set against the thrilling background of racing thoroughbreds, with Rogers in the role of an expert trainer who uses his wits in winning races and promoting romances, "In Old Kentucky" abounds in the rich humor for which he became famous.

Rialto to Show Zane Grey Film

A program of outstanding interest comes to the Rialto theater for tomorrow and Saturday, with Zane Grey's "Wanderer of the Wasteland" as the feature picture on the program, and Frank's Little Wranglers, the "kid-size" edition of the famous Arizona Wranglers, appearing on the stage as a special added attraction for all shows.

"Wanderer of the Wasteland," one of Grey's most widely read novels of the west, tells the poignant story of a man hounded by law. The cast includes Dean Jagger, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Benny Baker, "Buster" Crabbe, "Trixie" Friganza, Monte Blue, Raymond Hatton and Anna Q. Nilsson.

The Little Wranglers, composed of youngsters who are particularly adept in presenting old range ballads in veteran style, have a half-hour program on the stage for both matinee and evening shows.

The body of Gibbs was brought to Long Creek late yesterday and an inquest was held immediately. The jury placed the blame upon Keaton.

Gibbs, who had lived at Long Creek for 38 years, formerly owned a hotel in Pendleton. He had an interest in a lumber company near Date. His widow, a son and two daughters survive him.
