

KIWANIANS TOLD OF HEALTH WORK BY DR. JOHNSON

The city health officer of Ashland will be made a deputy Jackson county health officer after January 1, the Kiwanis club was told Monday at its weekly luncheon, meeting at the Hotel Medford by Dr. A. N. Johnson, county health officer.

Dr. Johnson briefly outlined the work of the county health officer, saying he performed the duties of several distinct officials: county health officer, county physician, coroner's physician, county jail physician, county poor farm physician, juvenile court physician and physician for county schools outside of Medford and Ashland.

Miss Blanche Runels, county nurse, outlined the work being done for children who cannot make normal adjustments, the service being rendered under the supervision and guidance of Dr. H. H. Dixon, noted psychiatrist of Portland. She described how corrections are made among children who are abnormal or subnormal.

Dr. Johnson said it was unfortunate that the United States constitution did not say anything regarding an individual's right to health, adding that the state constitution did not say much on the subject either. Demands were made to confine public health service to paupers, he asserted, and declared "we object to that."

When one must first establish that he is a pauper, his illness is liable to be neglected until he, and society as well, suffers irreparably, Dr. Johnson averred.

After telling of the accomplishments of the county nurses, Dr. Johnson invited the Kiwanians to visit the health offices in the courthouse and inspect the work of the health department.

O. C. Briggs, Medford sales superintendent of the Standard Oil Company of California, was introduced to the club as a new member of Kiwanis.

CARNEGIE PICTURE IN CITY'S LIBRARY CENTENNIAL MARK

As part of the Andrew Carnegie centennial celebrated yesterday, a reproduction of a portrait of the philanthropist by Luis Mora is on display at the public here, like pictures having been presented to all Carnegie libraries in the United States and the British dominions and colonies by the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The pictures are framed for permanent display and are accompanied by a series of seven illustrated posters containing some of the epigrammatic statements of Andrew Carnegie. The posters have been sent out by the American Library association to libraries in the United States and Canada, nearly 3,000 sets having been distributed.

Although Carnegie is known to the world as an industrialist and benefactor, he found time to do much writing. Some of the magazine articles published in the last century attracted wide attention, particularly those in which he expounded his philosophy of the trusteeship of wealth. He also wrote a number of books, among them being "The Gospel of Wealth," "The Empire of Business," "Round the World," "Triumph of Democracy" and his "Autobiography."

Carnegie possessed a faculty for pithy statements, many of which crept into his writings. At the request of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, Burton J. Hendrick, author of "The Life of Andrew Carnegie," selected from Carnegie's works the quotations published in the displays. They reflect something of the philosophy which inspired Carnegie's numerous benefactions and emphasized his belief that popular education is the foundation for a stable, progressive civilization. Carnegie recommended as the seven best fields for philanthropy: A university; a free public library, provided the community will accept and maintain it; hospitals, medical colleges, laboratories, and other institutions connected with the alleviation of human suffering, especially with the prevention rather than the cure of human ills; public parks, provided the community undertakes to maintain, beautify and preserve them inviolate; a hall suitable for meetings and concerts, provided a city will maintain and use it; swimming baths, provided a municipality undertakes their management; churches, provided the support of the churches is upon their own people.

The Andrew Carnegie centennial will be celebrated by the different Carnegie trusts in the United States and Great Britain, and by public libraries in the different parts of the world. Out of the $350,000,000 he gave away, Carnegie devoted more than $60,000,000 to library construction work. He built 2,811 libraries. These, with the 8,182 church organs made possible by his contributions, are usually regarded as the more personal of his many benefactions.

Centennial Reminds Scots Burgh Of Carnegie's Home Town Gifts

DUNFERMLINE, Scotland—(P)—In this ancient Scots burgh, where Andrew Carnegie dreamed as a boy of fame and success, the centenary of the birth of the world-known benefactor will be observed November 25. The 40,000 residents of Dunfermline have had no opportunity to forget the name of Carnegie. Every citizen has benefited in some way from Carnegie money. Every other street reveals some gift which the famous millionaire made to his beloved birthplace.

Cottage Still Stands.

Dunfermline today boasts of swimming pools, libraries, gymnasiums, technical schools. It has the most famous public park in Scotland. All are gifts of the man who went from humble poverty to great wealth.

The cottage where Carnegie was born still stands, a squat gray stone affair, with dormer windows jutting out from a quaint red-tiled roof. The attic room where he slept as a child is in virtually its original condition. Visitors from all parts of the world have inspected the room, with its low, sloping ceiling, and the old-fashioned bed built into a recess in the wall. Some of the original furniture, sober in appearance and solid, remains.

Annual Picnic Held.

One of the first sights to attract Carnegie as a boy was the Dunfermline Abbey, founded in the eleventh century by Malcolm Canmore, and the burial place of Robert the Bruce, whose name is emblazoned on the tower. The curfew bell which tolled—and it still does—was the signal at 8 o'clock for young Carnegie to go to bed.

Closed by the abbey was Pittencrieff Glen, a large estate which was bequeathed to Carnegie and his companions, no matter how much they wanted to wander through the dark wooded glen. Later, as a multi-millionaire, Carnegie bought the estate. It is now a park where thousands of school children are entertained yearly at a picnic which costs $5,000.

In direct contrast to the evidences of Carnegie's boyhood is the modern "Treasure House," adjoining his early home. Rulers, statesmen and corporate bodies throughout the world have contributed to the contents of the house. Gold and silver caskets from cities and towns, resplendent robes from the universities of Europe and America, and brilliantly illuminated scrolls, are assembled in tribute to the one-time bobbin boy.

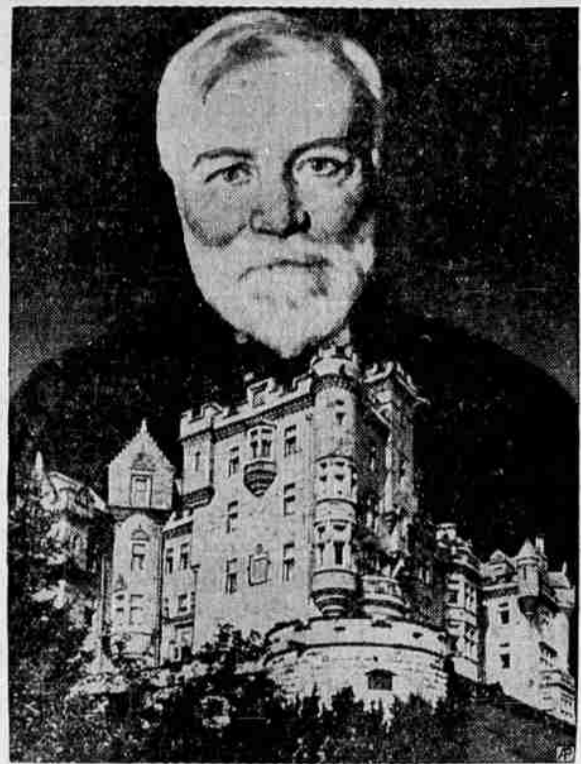

Letter from Menelik.

Among the records of appreciation is a parchment in strange characters: a letter from the late King of Kings, Menelik Second of Ethiopia. It reads as follows:

"He who has conquered the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Menelik II, King of Kings, Emperor of Ethiopia, to Mr. Andrew Carnegie:

"Peace be with you.

"Mr. Ellis has kindly told me of your nobleness and generosity to all people, and of your gift to the African Americans of the United States and your aid to them in gaining a higher sphere in civilization, know-edge, virtue and morality, and educating them on higher planes, of and for which I am greatly interested in and thankful, and may God give you power and strength to fulfill all your good wishes.

When the centennial of Andrew Carnegie's birth is observed November 25, his native Scots burgh, Dunfermline, may count again the many gifts of the famous millionaire. Above is seen Skibo Castle, which Carnegie owned in his native land, and where Mrs. Carnegie still spends her summers.

"Peace be with you. Done in Addis Ababa, Nov. 17, 1893."

OREGON EMPLOYMENT TAKES OCTOBER DROP BELOW SEASON LINE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26—(AP)—Oregon employment declined more than seasonally in October, the federal reserve monthly survey indicated today. Reports from 110 industrial firms indicated employment was 93 per cent of the 1923-1925 average, compared with 105 in September and 77 in October, 1934.

The preliminary employment index, adjusted for seasonal variation, declined to 85 from 88 in September. In October last year the adjusted index was 70.

There was a marked decline in the number of workers in the food products industries accompanying a reduction in cannery operations, a normal seasonal development.

Lumbering and wood manufacturers declined about seasonally.

Weekly payrolls decreased somewhat, but less than employment, indicating workers were probably putting in longer hours.

On a percentage basis, employment was 21 per cent higher than a year ago, while payrolls were up 38 per cent.

The survey covered 22,329 workers, who drew $509,062 weekly. The average weekly wage was $22.80, compared with $20.66 in September and $20.05 in October, 1934.

OREGON ARMORY BUILDING PLANS GIVEN PWA OKEH

SALEM, Nov. 26—(AP)—Official confirmation for construction of 13 armories in Oregon, most of them at a cost of $45,000 paid out of federal grants, has been given by the public works administration, it was learned at headquarters of the national guard here today.

The PWA approval, it was declared, was only one step in the process before final authorization can be given. These projects yet have to be approved by the commander general and by the president himself.

The list did not include the community center armory at Salem which has not yet been approved, nor a similar one at Corvallis, which previously had received the PWA approval.

The list, at a cost of $45,000, includes those for Grants Pass, Baker, Pendleton, Astoria, Forest Grove, The Dalles, Oregon City, La Grande, St. Helens, Gresham and Lebanon. Those at Hillsboro, Union and Springfield would cost about $25,000.

The Portland million dollar armory was likewise included.

Major General George A. White said here today he did not "look for any early building activities on these armories, but was hopeful for the ultimate construction of them with federal funds."

FEDERAL COMPETITION IN BUSINESS OPPOSED BY U. S. CHAMBER POLL

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP)—Overwhelming opposition to government competition with private enterprise and to government spending without relation to revenue, was recorded today in a poll of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

The chamber made public results of the poll on these and other questions which it submitted recently to the membership.

The questions and the vote on each:

1. "Should there be extension of federal jurisdiction into matters of state and local concern?" Yes, 48 No, 1798.

2. "Should the federal government at the present time exercise federal spending power without relation to revenues?" Yes, 22 No, 1845.

3. "Should there be government competition with private enterprise—for regulatory or other purposes?" Yes, 56 No, 1825.

4. "Should all grants of authority by congress to the executive department of the federal government be within clearly defined limits?" Yes, 1813 No, 58.

About 750,000 business men belong to the member organizations.
