

ESTES AND HOLLIS MATCH IS FEATURE OF MAT FESTIVAL

The middle bout on the three-star card at the Armory stole the show last night, when Tools Estes and Ken Hollis eclipsed the main event and the curtain raiser with an exhibition of fireworks that left the crowd gasping and Estes victor by the referee's decision.

The match started clean and fast, with a whirl of arms and legs that promised a bout of pure speed and skill. Barely two minutes after the start of the melee, Hollis found himself unable to refrain from dirty work and clipped Estes a resounding smack on the jaw. This the Hawaiian brushed aside and the match went on until Hollis again found a chance to slug.

At the tenth or twelfth attempt at dirtiness Estes became angry, the first time he had done so in a Medford ring, and the party started. Hollis outweighed Estes slightly, and easily had the edge in the foot work, but the cat-like quickness of the island champ was almost too much for him in the first round.

Near the end of the first frame, under the Australian system of six 10-minute rounds, Estes was slugging as heartily as was Hollis, with something of the edge on his opponent when the gong ended the round.

In the next canto, Hollis took the fall with three terrific body slams and a press after he had kicked, choked and pugged Estes into near insensibility. The round was nearly even until Hollis managed to get Estes groggy with an elbow jab on the jaw.

In the third round, while the two were looking about on the floor and Hollis was enthusiastically choking Estes, Referee Ray Friable walked into a flying foot and was cold on the canvas for over three minutes while the two combatants roared through as exciting a match as the crowd could stand, judging by the howls they sent up. Estes threw Hollis over in a body slam and received a terrific kick in the abdomen for his trouble, catapulting him under the ropes onto the floor.

Thoroughly enraged, and with Friable lying unconscious on the floor, he came sailing over the top rope with his famous flying scissors and knocked his man playmate flat, then ricocheted off the top rope and, tearing back, nearly tore Hollis' head off with a drop-kick. It was a simple matter to apply a body press, which he did until Friable came to and awarded him the round.

INJURY TO WILSON LEAVES TIGERS IN BAD PREDICAMENT

Prospects of the Medford high school football team entering the Ashland Turkey Day fray with a full quota of man-power slumped again last night, when it was learned that Bob Wilson, 15-year-old alternate center, had received a fractured collar bone in blocking practice. The injury will keep Wilson out of the game for the rest of the season.

Wilson's injury leaves the Black Tornado with only one center, 16-year-old Ardo Stocks, "Iron man," who went through the entire Granta Pass game without a letup. Stocks is perfectly capable of holding up his own end of the game, his record shows, but an injury to him would leave the Tiger line centerless. Coach Bowerman is grooming another player to fill in at the position if necessary. Root, backfield man shifted from center, may return to his old duties.

There will be no scrimmage today or tomorrow, with spinal drill and pass offense and defense taking the center of the stage. With a fast, sure blocking assured on Ashland's granite field, the Tornado is preparing to open up with its razzle-dazzle offense held in leash for the past several games by slippery fields. Bowerman said last night.

Spinners, cut-backs, end runs and laterals will undoubtedly be a large part of his attack. Bowerman intimated, and added that his charges, while stressing their own ball carrying duties, will be primed to stop the offensive thrusts of Ashland's own ball-carrying aces, Hess and Schilling.

The game may be the last of the season for the locals, who are experiencing considerable difficulty in lining up a post-season game for the state championship. Negotiations are still going forward for a game on December 7 with McLoughlin high school of Milton-Freewater, but nothing has been definitely arranged. Mac high meets the powerful Hood River eleven Thanksgiving Day, and up-state prognosticators are giving Hood River an even break on the betting.

The wrestling fraternity performed a rapid bit of mental field-reversing last night and almost clamored for Bob Kennaston, Gold Hill's Mad Marine, when Ken Hollis was doing his best to foul his way into a win over Tools Estes. Whether this means that the fans would like to see Kennaston thump Hollis, or just want to sacrifice the Gold Hill pride to a good butchering, would be hard to say. But the demand to see Kennaston against Hollis was there.

Ever since Mrs. Tracy, Mail Tribune correspondent at Toledo, sent in a item declaring that mud-hens are coots, there has been discussion on the subject. A coot is protected by law. If you call a limit of 15 per day during the migratory game bird season protection.

The mud-hen has a lovely name, and has always been pretty generally looked upon. Occasionally an ugly rumor will come in that some lost hunter had saved his life by eating a mud-hen, but this has always been whispered in the darkest corners for fear that if the news got out the fellow would be shunned by society, as though he had eaten a rat or a skunk (we've been told that that happens too, upon occasion).

Enheartened by Mrs. Tracy's report that the mud-hen really has another name, and if called by the other name can be mentioned nearly anywhere, there have been a few hearty souls who will now admit having eaten mud-hens—ah, er, coots.

Mr. Webster's information on the subject is that a coot is the ankle joint and fetlock of a horse. That's a different kind of coot, we suppose, but we've probably eaten plenty of that, too. Webster also admits that a coot is a kind of duck that is extremely lazy and stupid and can hardly be chased as a game bird. Mud-hen is not given, but mud-pullet is, a mud-pullet being a Florida gallinule, which in turn is related to coots and is found hiding behind a mess of purple and green feathers. In Europe, you can't legally shoot coots or mud-hens either until next year, so we'll resume the discussion then.

When, in 1926, an American team journeyed to Berlin, Walter Marty may be one of the high jumpers competing, even though he was supposed to have been ruled out by illness. Marty now holds the high jump record, but no one expects him to be much of a jumper for a couple of years. Recently he went out and, ignoring his injuries, leaped wildly over a six-foot six-inch bar at Fresno State college, where he is a student.

DALLAS HIGH GRIDDERS IN FIRST WIN OF YEAR

Dallas high school won its first football victory of the season yesterday, trampling Woodburn high school under a four-touchdown barrage to win, 25 to 0.

It is still too early to know what kind of material he will have, but here are a few who will report: Bob Smith and Stan Kunnann (until mid-year), "Stretcher" Ettinger, Ray Lewis, John Dickinson, Floyd Baker, Leonard Hicks, Sam VanDyke, Ed Valer and Bob Ettinger from the football team. Elson Grow will probably be another grizzer reporting.

Clearing of snow from Crater Lake highway between Diamond Lake junction and the west entrance to the park has been completed by the state highway department, the national park service announced today. The road had been blocked by snow.

Ponderous Primo Carnera held a comeback win in each of his huge paws today and looked around for bigger game to tackle in his return trip up the heavyweight flaccid ladder.

He took his second comeback barrier in stride last night, outpointing Ford Smith, Montana cowboy, in 10 rounds before 6,500 fans at Arena.

Smith, whose 200 pounds were 55½ less than the 267½ at which Carnera tipped the beam, threatened only in the first three rounds. After that, Carnera's weight and heavy left jab had the Missouri boy in trouble until the tenth.

There were no knockdowns.

LET THIS HIGHBALL test CONVINCE YOU, too

The only way to taste a whiskey's quality and flavor is either in a high ball or straight. Cocktails conceal a whiskey's true worth. That's why many whiskeys that "get by" in cocktails fail in the highball test.

Hiram Walker's TEN HIGH is a highball whiskey—a straight whiskey that needs no "dressing up" with other ingredients.

And you'll find that the way to make a perfect cocktail is to use a good highball whiskey TENHIGH!
