CAPTIVE ADMITS SHOOTING POLICE NEAR TWIN FALLS

Twin Falls News who had joined the hunt after putting the newspaper to press early today.
Van Vlack surrendered his pistol to Carl H. Groth, linotype operator, who was accompanied by Lee Stiles and Dan Sieber. They notified Sheriff E. P. Prater of his capture and Van Vlack accompanied the officer quietly to the jail here.
He was placed in a cell before more than a handful of persons in the court house knew of his arrest.
Doses After Breakfast
In a county jail cell here Van Vlack asked for some breakfast and then appeared to doze off as Sheriff Prater admitted to the corridor members of the postoffice that had been seeking him.
The alarm for Van Vlack and his companion was spread over southern Idaho yesterday after the girl's parents had received a telegram from her.
Cooper and Givens, stationed near Buhl, halted a car answering the description of Van Vlack's and as it was being followed it in their own machine, overtook it and forced it to a halt.
As the two officers left their car and approached the other, they were shot through the eye and apparently killed instantly.
Givens was shot in the neck and the arm and seriously wounded. At the hospital here he was said to have a fighting chance for recovery.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho, Nov. 26. — (AP)—Douglas Van Vlack, held as the slayer of Highway Patrolman Fontaine Cooper, denied he had harmed Mildred Hook, his former wife, who was with him until last night on their feverish ride from Tacoma.
"Did you slug or shoot her?" Van Vlack was asked by a reporter.
"No, sir, I did not," he replied.
Police feared strands of long black hair on Van Vlack's pistol when he was captured as he lay exhausted in a ditch this morning were evidence she might have been harmed.
Following discovery of Van Vlack's abandoned car three miles from the point of arrest, posses combed the vicinity today in search for Miss Hook.
Going to Salt Lake.
Van Vlack declared the girl had accompanied him against her will at first, but later continued with him voluntarily.
"I took my former wife because I wanted her," he asserted. "She had obtained a divorce two and a half months ago on the grounds of 'burdensome home life,' after we had been married two and a half years. I didn't resist the suit.
"We had planned to go on to Salt Lake City and then somewhere in the southwest.
"I picked her up on a Tacoma street and drove 24 hours to Boise, where we arrived at 5 p. m. Sunday. She opposed my plans at first, but she voluntarily sent a telegram from Boise to her parents.
"After shooting the two officers we drove blindly around side roads. We left the car last night, walking together for a while. She was wearing high-heeled shoes, and became exhausted after wandering through the fields.
" I decided it would be better and that I would have a better chance if we were to split. I walked along the bank of a ditch and she followed, but for a way, but it was dark and we couldn't see. Then I walked all night alone.
Gave Her No Money.
Van Vlack was arrested three miles from where his abandoned car was discovered by a rancher some hours later.
"We made no plans to get together again," he continued. "I supposed she would go back home. I didn't give her any money and I don't know how much she may have had. I paid her $600 when the divorce was granted. She could have wired home for money if she needed it."
Van Vlack had $650 on his person when he was arrested.
He asserted his pistol was under the pillow between them as they slept in a Boise hotel, and that it was within reach of the girl in the car.

At Rialto
A mighty drama of conflicting human emotions and a decided drama of today, "Dante's Inferno," with Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor and Henry B. Walthall, opens at the Rialto theater for today and Wednesday. "Dante's Inferno" serves to inspire a modern love story theme based on the age-old literary classic, "The Divine Comedy," by Dante, in which a woman strives desperately to save the man she loves from destruction in a modern Hell.
The story tells of a transgressor, played by Tracy, who starts as a stocker on a ship and rises to a position of wealth and affluence by chicanery and trickery. He builds an amusement concession depicting the "Inferno" on a floating pleasure ship in this manner the thread of the old classic is woven into this drama of today. Claire Trevor plays his charming but unappreciated wife. The startling climax comes when she gets him to play square and thus his glimpses of a life in purgatory also stop, giving the movie romance sought by all young people of today.

At Rialto

"Baby Face"
Charles Butterworth, one of the screen's greatest "scene stealers," has a change to show his full worth, carrying the starring role of "Baby Face Harrington," at the Rialto theater today and tomorrow, a laugh-laden story of a timid bookkeeper who found himself being taken for a tough gangster.

Coming to Craterian and Holly

Walter C. Kelly, known on the vaudeville stage for years as "The Virginia Judge," now brings his famous character to the screen in the picture bearing that title, playing tomorrow night at the Craterian theater for matinee and evening shows, also tomorrow night only at the Holly theater.
Kelly, who bases his character study on a real life judge he knew in the southland, plays the part of genial depot of a sleepy Virginia town, where he settles disputes, keeps the darkies from carving each other with razors, plays Cupid to a wayward son's romance and goes through life with a down-to-earth philosophy in his heart and a kindly wisecrack on his lips. The picture is the type that appeals to the entire family—full of rich humor and not the slightest suggestion of "dirt."

Included in the supporting cast are Marsha Hunt, Johnny Downs and Stepin Fetchit, whose amusing figure and lazy comedy drifts in and out of the picture at the most unexpected intervals.
