

Tigers Primed for Turkey Day Trip to Ashland

LITHIANS PROMISE TO SHOOT WORKS IN DESPERATE FIGHT

Locals in Fine Shape for Annual Classic Except for Wilson — Bowerman's Men Expect Real Battle

A coolly confident Black Tornado football team will take the field at Ashland at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon all cocked and primed, ready to go off in the face of an underdog Ashland team that will be fighting desperately, their backs to the wall, to hand Medford their first defeat of the season. Knowing that they are the underdogs, the Ashland Grizzlies are going to abandon caution and shoot the works in an attempt to kick the props from under the Medford egg. Coach Fisher has stated, "With everything to gain and not a thing in the world to lose, with a paunch attack that at times has seemed almost perfect, and with two great running backs in Hess and Schilling, the Grizzly team is feeling more confident of a win over Medford than it has in several years, Ashland reports."

Coach Bowerman's charges realize that the success of their entire season hinges on tomorrow's game, he said today, and will be prepared for a stubborn and probably inspired resistance by Ashland. Comparative scores against common foes gives the Black Tornado the edge, with Ashland having taken a surprise win over Klamath Falls, 7-6, compared to Medford's 19-14 win over the Pelicans. Ashland tied Grants Pass, 0-0, earlier in the season, but later dropped a 17-14 struggle, while Medford thumped the Cavemen, 19-0, last Saturday.

With the promise of a good footing for their brilliant running attack for the first time since before the Klamath game on November 2, the Tigers are expected to open up with the lateral, winners and cut-backs which have netted them 177 points in six games, but which were halted somewhat in the Klamath and Grants Pass encounters.

The Medford squad will enter the fray at almost full strength, the only injury of any consequence being the broken collar bone of Wilson, alternate center. Stan Kunneman, veteran end, who will be playing his last game for the Red and Black unless a post-season struggle is signed, is almost fully recovered from an old knee injury, and Ray Lewis, husky blocking back and signal caller, will be in the starting lineup, despite a wounded shoulder which kept him on the sidelines through part of the Grants Pass game.

The Ashland team will also enter the game in prime condition, with the lone exception of Leonard Warren, blocking halfback, who cracked a shoulder bone in the Crescent City game two weeks ago. Parker Heas, big and fast passer and ace ball packer, will be in the starting lineup after fully recovering from a shoulder injury received in a car wreck while he was journeying to Klamath Falls to see the Medford game there. Hess, after that game, stated "I don't see how Medford can beat us," and added that the rest of the Grizzlies felt the same way about the game.

In the past 10 years, the Tigers have run up 498 points to the Grizzlies' 92. Comparative scores since 1919 are given:

HIGH GRID GAMES TOMORROW LACK TITLE THRILLS

(By the Associated Press)
High school football's mythical state championship—usually a piping hot Thanksgiving season topic—is just a forgotten phrase in this season's turkey-day classic.

Four Oregon prep teams are undefeated and untied in state competition, and barring upsets will remain so after tomorrow's battles. None of the potential champions meet. Milton-Freewater, Medford, Washington of Portland and Myrtle Point are the big four.

Myrtle Point cancelled its Thanksgiving day game with Eugene when Eugene suddenly was dumped from the unbeaten, untied class by its half-brother, University High.

Myrtle Point said health authorities remained adamant against the coast eleven invading the Medford fair, because of infantile paralysis cases nearby.

Medford will play its oldest rival, Ashland, which is the dejected underdog. The Southern Oregon League's final standings will hinge on the contest.

The central Oregon and eastern Oregon football championship will be on the block when Milton-Freewater meets the strong Apple Pickers at Hood River, aside from its early season defeat by Washington high of Portland. Hood River has won all its games by decisive counts.

Washington high and John Rogers high of Spokane meet at Portland in an inter-city game which should give some indication of the comparative strength of Oregon and Washington teams.

Another Thanksgiving day classic will be The Dalles team's invasion of Pendleton for runner-up honors in the central and eastern Oregon areas.

Medford as the trapezoidal bright spot of the country! Why not say the members of the Medford Gun club who put on the biggest shoot west of the Mississippi this year. T. E. Daniels, president of the club, has announced a possibility that the club will put on a two or three-day shoot in June of 1936, and the Medford bombers have fallen in with this idea whole-heartedly in order to maintain their position at the top.

The national publicity given the city and the club by their 1935 shoot was greater than that afforded any trapshoot for years. The reason was that trapshoot-ing had suffered through the lean years of the depression, and the added money offered here attracted more scattergunners than could reasonably have been expected.

Mike Peck, San Francisco wrestler who has mangled muscles from the Embarcadero to Rubbing Well Road, thinks that jiu jitsu is about as tough a way of wrestling as man could devise. "Yeah, I've wrestled jiu jitsu, but I didn't do so well at it. I didn't do so well."

Mac high of Milton-Freewater chooses to take an announcement from Medford that "Bowerman is still attempting to sign McLoughlin high for a game here on December 7, but to date no arrangements have been completed."

Each fighter wears a canvas jacket that comes half way to his knees. A strong belt is knotted around his waist. To win, you've gotta either make the other guy quit, or render him unconscious. To do this, the other guy will have you right straight up in the air, and if you light on your noggin' the fight is over. But before any Japanese can fight jiu jitsu, he has to know a lot about anatomy, and be able to bring an unconscious man to by twisting his neck, or his head, around.

When a fighter gets just so good, in jiu jitsu, he is moved up a notch, and can wear another color belt, something like the degrees of Masonry. One of the little tricks that the one I fought had was to grab ahold

CCC BASKETBALL SEASON STARTS; DISTRICT ZONED

The basketball season has arrived in the Medford CCC district, practice games have been played by many companies, and the official schedules will soon be announced for the five "zones" into which the district has been divided.

The long race for the zone and district championships promises thrills galore, for from many quarters has come word that the teams this season are even stronger than last.

Athletic officers have been appointed in each of the five zones, and they have been instructed to draw up schedules for official games which will determine the trophy winners. The zones and their athletic officers follow:

MARSHFIELD: Coos Head, McKinley, Sitkum, Bradford and China Flats. Lieut. Ragnar Unden, Bradford.

GRANTS PASS: Rand, Wimer, Oregon Caves and Gasquet. Lieut. Alfred H. Hopkins, Oregon Caves.

KLAMATH FALLS: By, Bonanza, Klamath, Tule Lake and Clear Lake. Lieut. James M. Wiley, Jr., By.

MEDFORD: South Fork, Elk Creek, Prescott, Applegate and headquarters detachment. Lieut. Maurice M. Radcliffe, South Fork.

SPECIAL ZONE: Oak Knoll and Indian Creek; Humburg Mountain and Appas; Steamboat and South Umpqua. Lieut. Maurice D. Cochrane, Indian Creek.

Although championships will be determined in the zones outlined, unofficial games may be booked between camps in different zones. It will be noted that one "special zone" has been made up of six isolated camps. These have been paired off and the winners of inter-camp games between the pairs will meet in Medford for the special zone title. The winner will then represent the zone against the other four zones in the district tournament.
