

WILL UPSET WHEN GAUCHOS SHOWED HIM LARIAT TRICKS

Will Rogers threw an Oklahoma lasso around the hearts of a nation. But one time, long before he had brought a nation into laughing submission by his wise-cracking, gun-chewing, rope-throwing, Will became so dependent on his failures in throwing the lasso that he went, cut his rope and went to sea. W. C. Fields, famous comedian of the stage and screen, and pal of Will Rogers thru-out the latter's stage and screen career, is authority for the story.

"Will loved to tell the story of how he went to South America to teach the gaucho to lasso cattle. 'These gauchoes' said Will, 'stood about a hundred yards behind me, threw their lariats over my head and roped their cows after I had missed on my throw.

"I felt bad, I can tell you. I even cried about it and cut up my rope." "Will said that after that disappointment he accepted a position as chambermaid for a parcel of mules being sent to Darwin, Natal, south eastern Africa, but he came back to make millions laugh."

Handicapped children will be the principal beneficiaries of the Will Rogers memorial fund. By handicapped children the memorial commission means those suffering from blindness or other physical disabilities; those who have been victims of illness who can be brought back to partial or complete activity through expert medical attention; those without parents or whose parents lack the money to give them the proper shelter, schooling and home care.

If you wish to help keep the spirit of Will Rogers alive in this work so close to his heart, bring or send your subscription to this office. It is the aim of the commission to have millions of Will Rogers' friends participate. It is not the size of the subscription, but the subscription itself that is important.

A pre-holiday lull seems to have fallen over Medford social circles, with only a small number of events scheduled to take place at the Town club this week, and a social quiet pervading other groups.

Today, as usual, is ladies' day at the Town club, when feminine members take over the clubhouse for luncheon and various informal afternoon activities.

Tomorrow afternoon, Mrs. Corbin Edgel and Mrs. J. J. Emmens will be joint hostesses to a group of friends for luncheon at the Town club, and Thursday afternoon ladies of the army set will gather for their weekly luncheon and bridge.

for clemency, the death sentence would not be disturbed and Hauptmann would be executed.

Asked whether his conference with Hauptmann in the state prison death house and later with Dr. Erasmus Hudson, a defense witness, and the defense attorney "indicated" there was some doubt in his mind as to Hauptmann's guilt, the governor replied:

"It indicates no such thing. No one in the world knows how I'll vote on this thing. Some people say my moves are political. They are not political, if it could be proven to me that not only Hauptmann, but any man is innocent, I wouldn't be moved by popular clamor or maudlin sentiment if I never got another vote. It is a matter of duty to satisfy myself about this case. I've got the greatest burden."

Wife Silent

The governor said that Mrs. Hoffman had "refused" to comment on the case to inquirers. The Journal quoted her as saying she was "sorry" for Mrs. Anna Hauptmann and the couple's child.

The governor steadfastly declined to reveal what took place in his interview with Hauptmann. He justified his visit by saying the case was before the court of pardons "from the moment there was a conviction."

Asked if he had any new evidence in the case, the governor said the only thing before him was "representations by both sides." Some persons, including Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the governor said, think Hauptmann guilty, and others, including Ellis Parker, Burlington detective, think him innocent.

The governor denied he had in his possession an affidavit purporting to show the ladder evidence was "framed."

The governor left for Detroit to attend a safety council meeting today. He said he would return tonight and denied the trip had any relation to the Hauptmann case.

LEGION WILL STAGE STAG PARTY TONIGHT

Everything was in readiness this morning for the annual stag party to be held tonight by Medford post No. 15, American Legion, after a regular business meeting at K. P. hall.

The business session, scheduled for 8:15, will be brief so that little time will be lost in putting aside prosaic affairs for the more enjoyable items on the yearly party program, Fred Fry, chairman, said.

There will be plenty of food, amusements and entertainment, Mr. Fry said in urging all Legionnaires to be present.

Not an official head has been raised in acknowledgement. Not an official word spoken.

Unofficially, the highest here seem to have an assured outlook on the credit situation. If they had desired to speak, they would have said something like this:

Federal reserve policy has been to encourage excess reserves in the belief that this would eventually bring pressure on the frozen capital market and break up the ice. First symptoms of thaw have now been noticed. Probably the FRB had nothing to do with it, but, at any rate, the test of the policy pressure is just now about to be made.

Thus, it is hardly reasonable to expect that the board will reverse itself with vigor.

If the highest further disclosed their minds on this most important issue it involves inflationary or deflationary pressure from Washington, they would say:

It is true that the FRB open market committee bought government bonds in the open market to offset a deflationary movement which now has ceased. Instead of gold going out, it is now coming into the country.

Likewise, it is now true that the treasury refinancing program is completed. There is no serious practical reason why the treasury would object to a moderate selling policy.

But, at the same time, the new dealers believe the advisory committee brick was propelled more by a desire for better interest than by any other motive power.

The sum total of all these reactions to the advisory council demand, therefore, seems to amount to one simple word: "No."

Note—Remember, also, that the present federal reserve board members are now anxiously awaiting reappointment to the White House.

The best tea-table story of the budding social season is the one about a Washington society leader and a governmental commission.

It seems that this commission is one of those obscure overworked governmental authorities which meet once a year, or thereabouts. Its August meeting for this year was held here a few weeks ago. The commissioners, including some representatives from a foreign land, were invited by the society lady to tea.

The big day for the commissioners saw them properly arrayed in striped pants and authoritative stiff collars. They made a very dignified formal appearance in the salon of their official hostess, but were somewhat disconcerted to find her missing. Her secretary explained she had been delayed on business.

Their feet began to ache after half an hour of shifting their weight from one to the other. Then the absent lady blew in through the door on a wintry blast. Explanations were not necessary, as the lady was attired in horseback riding raiment. The secretary took the rap, as they say in Tammany social circles, explaining that she had neglected to remind her mistress of the engagement.

The lady herself made a gracious apology and said she would join the party as soon as she could dress. She must have been delayed at this, also. The commissioners, after waiting until their feet were fairly screaming, decided unanimously that they had other engagements.
