

$12,000 IS COST OF EACH FAMILY SENT TO ALASKA

Matanuska Experiment Expense $2,000,000 to First of Year—Costs Expected to Decrease With Time

JUNEAU, Alaska, Jan. 8.—(UP)—Each family in the Matanuska valley agricultural colony cost the government approximately $12,000 up to January 1, E. W. Griffin, territorial secretary of Alaska, announced today.

Griffin completed an audit of the accounts of the Alaska rural rehabilitation commission, which now administers the transplanted group of farmers from Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. Expenditures since the colonists left their former homes in May totaled $2,000,000.

In return the government will receive, under contracts, $3,000 from each family, payable over a period of 30 years.

Expenditures during the next two years will be much below those of the first, it was pointed out, although the commission plans to build up the colony to its original quota of 200 families next spring. It was estimated the new pioneers would become self-supporting in three years.

There are now 107 families in the valley, Griffin reported. Two hundred were brought from the states in May, but 93 deserted and returned because they were dissatisfied with prospects of administrative methods.

The $2,000,000 included costs of transporting the families and their belongings to the Pacific coast by train and to Alaska by boat; building for each a modern house of logs or lumber and furnishing it; clearing land, building a community center and roads; providing a start of live stock and necessary farm machinery and feeding and clothing colonists and workers.

Five hundred transient workers from the states were maintained in the valley for several months. Later, when they proved unsatisfactory to administrators, they were replaced by native Alaskans.

EXTENSION CLASS TO BE ORGANIZED

The general extension division of the Oregon state system of higher education is offering extension work in Medford during the present winter term. The courses which are being offered are in the fields of psychology and education and will be conducted by Dr. V. D. Bain of the faculty of the Southern Oregon State Normal school. Class meetings will be held once a week for 12 weeks for two-hour periods. A preliminary meeting will be held in Medford in the high school building, Tuesday, January 14, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of organizing the classes and determining the time of meeting.

This work allows upper division credit toward graduation from the state university and state colleges. Each course will count two hours.

The courses that have been suggested for this quarter are "The Psychology of Learning" and "The Psychology of the Exceptional Child." Neither of these subjects will be of special interest to teachers or others concerned with the care or guidance of children. However, the choice of courses is not restricted to those suggested above.

LUTHER HAAK OF EAGLE POINT ILL

EAGLE POINT, Jan. 8.—(Sp.)—Friends of Luther K. Haak will be sorry to learn that he suffered a sudden heart attack (angina pectoris) the night of December 31, and has been in a critical condition ever since, although today's reports are that he is somewhat improved and there is now hope of his ultimate recovery.

Mr. Haak has had several previous attacks of this same trouble, the last one about a year ago. The attacks, however, were not so serious and confined mostly to the edema symptoms (dropsy). This time the edema symptoms are not so conspicuous, but the heart shock is much more serious.

Mrs. Haak is caring for her husband at their little farm home here. Both Mr. and Mrs. Haak are very highly considered in this community and throughout the county, being people of a very high type of intelligence and moral integrity, always cheerful and optimistic through all kinds of adversity and trouble.

MILK KEPT CLEAN RETAINS PURITY SAYS INSPECTOR

By Charles W. Austin, (City Milk Inspector)
I am asked many times of late as to quality and safety of raw or pasteurized milk, meaning I presume, which is best or healthiest? I might say I appreciate the compliment for anyone even presuming that a milk inspector would be an authority on so vital a question to them.

However, in my own case, I am quite like the old colored auntie who was asked by her southern mistress, a young city-bred mother, as to the best of most healthful temperature of bath water for infants—raw or pasteurized? Auntie replied, "Well, honey, I don't exactly member about raw or pasteurized babies, but the way I does with water is to put the baby in and if he turns red it's too hot; and if he turns blue, it's too cold." So perhaps with the milk—if baby changes color alarmingly by the use of either raw or pasteurized, one might be justified in making a change.

I quote from a recent editorial in "The Dairy World": "Painstaking detail in the producing and processing of milk is not only healthful, but it's a God-bestowed privilege to aid materially in raising a strong and virile nation. Cleanliness has been long acclaimed as next to Godliness, but in maintaining purity in milk, I claim it's Godliness itself."

To again quote from the editor of "The Milk Dealer": "Painstaking detail in a milk plant or pasteurizing processes can't restore quality or cleanliness which milk has lost between the cow and a plant way-tank. Any loss thus occurring puts milk just so many hours nearer the spoiling point."

The housewife should remember that she also has a very grave responsibility in both the quality maintained and the sanitation of the milk supply. Light, temperature, exposure or neglect hastens that point of spoiling faster as time lengthens.

It's a fallacy for anyone to presume that because milk is canned or condensed it's cleaner or quality laden with all the virtues of native milk.

I am frank to state that milk can't be made clean, but it can be kept clean.

UNIVERSITY CAST TO GIVE PLAY AT DRAMA CONCLAVE

First of the southern Oregon-northern California drama conferences planned as annual events by the drama department of the Southern Oregon Normal school, under the direction of Angus L. Bowmer, is scheduled for January 17, 18 and 19, according to an announcement made today by Mr. Bowmer. An invitation is extended to everyone in this area interested in drama, and the school has worked out a carefully planned program designed to be of interest to everyone, and particularly to the amateur producer, Mr. Bowmer stated.

An outstanding feature of the three-day program will be the presentation by the University of Oregon players of "The Rivals," by Richard Brinsley Sheridan. This brilliant costume comedy is being especially prepared for presentation at the conference under the direction of Otille Selbott, head of the division of drama at the university. Two performances of the play are scheduled, and it is felt by those planning the conference that more than any other event of the program, this presentation will bring fine entertainment to the general public as well as those attending the conference.

Mr. Bowmer has secured the promise of Miss Floyd Crutchfield of Los Angeles, to appear as principal speaker. Miss Crutchfield, an outstanding authority on drama and the problems of the amateur producer, is head of the Los Angeles branch of the Samuel French Publishing company, and her research and accomplishments in this field are widely recognized, stated Mr. Bowmer.

It is expected by those in charge that the round-table discussions in specialized fields of the theater will prove of great value to those attending. Among the various phases of drama to be discussed are: "Problems of the director," head of the division of drama at Oregon State college; "Technical problems of scenery and lighting," Horace Robinson of the division of drama at the University of Oregon; "Costumes," by Lois Bowmer; "Puppetry" and "Make-up." These and the other group discussions planned will be led by an expert in each field.

The Southern Oregon Normal school will revive George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" which is now in the midst of a run of six performances. This production will effectively demonstrate how a modern comedy may be staged without the aid of scenery or stage platform, which Mr. Bowmer believes will go far toward helping solve some of the most important difficulties encountered by amateur producers in small communities or organizations which often lack adequate facilities.

A complete schedule of events for the three-day conference will appear at a later date.

OREGON'S NEW AAA WILL FACE TEST

SALEM, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Oregon's new agricultural adjustment act will face a state supreme court or district court test within the next few weeks. Morton Tompkins, Orange leader and one of its sponsors, declared here today. Tompkins would not state who would bring the suit, but said such a suit was being prepared. In the meantime the state agricultural department was making a complete survey of farm prices as provided under the special session law. The act was passed in an attempt to eliminate objections raised by the Oregon court when it declared the old measure unconstitutional because of its delegation of power.

WISCONSIN RECOVERY LAW CONSTITUTIONAL

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 8.—(UP)—The Wisconsin recovery law of 1935, patterned after the NRA, was held valid today by the state supreme court. The effect was to sustain 11 codes of fair competition.

AMES, Ia., Jan. 8.—(A)—The six United States supreme court justices who voted the AAA unconstitutional were found hanged in effigy in a highway near the Iowa State college campus today. Cardboard effigies of the justices were attached to an advertising sign and were found by Harry Davis of Boone, Ia. He notified police, who cut the figures down.

V. F. W. WILL SHARE BONUS CASH WITH DISABLED BUDDIES

If immediate cash payment of World war veterans' adjusted service certificates is authorized by the 1936 congress, every member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will share the amount due him with disabled veterans and with the V. F. W. national home for war orphans at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, according to a nation-wide plan now being inaugurated.

This material exemplification of the V. F. W. slogan "One for all and all for one" was explained here today by Commander George Codding of Crater Lake Post No. 1833, V. F. W. The plan calls for creation of a "War Chest Trust Fund" of $1,000,000 with which to protect the legislative interests of disabled veterans and their dependents, Commander Codding explained.

Commander-in-Chief James E. Van Zandt, as chairman of the V. F. W. War Chest Trust Fund, is asking every World war veteran in our organization as well as those who do not belong, to pledge the sum of at least $10 to this trust fund, to be paid as soon as the adjusted service certificates are redeemed in cash," Codding stated. "Prospects for victory in the campaign for immediate cash payment of the 'bonus' were never more encouraging than at present. We believe that every one of the three and one-half million World war veterans to whom this payment is
