Nino Martini at Craterian and Holly

Introducing Nino Martini—whose voice is already well known to millions of radio listeners—in his first screen role, "Here to Romance" will be at the Craterian theatre tomorrow only for matinee and evening shows, also tomorrow night only at the Holly theatre.

With Genevieve Tobin and Anita Louise supplying the love interest—both wanting the same man—and a cast that includes Maria Mambarelli, the famous dancer, Madame Schumann-Heink, beloved singer known as "Mother" to thousands of dough-boys during the war, whose film debut has already caused her to be talked about as the first real logical successor to Marie Dressler, Reginald Denny and many others, the film is the dramatic, comical and tinsel story of a young man who finds his rise to fame depends not alone upon his glorious voice but upon the caprices of those who are in a position to help him.

Martini sings several modern and classic numbers, including the theme "Here to Romance", "Midnight in Paris" and a comedy tune, "Hunkledora".
