THE GRANGE

Central Point Grange

Central Point Grange met with a good attendance January 17. The play director, Mrs. Victor Bursell, reported the play was progressing nicely. January 30 at 8 p. m. was chosen as the date and time to present the play. It was also decided at this meeting to have a good orchestra present and all who cared to do so could dance after the play.

Central Point is centrally located and easy to reach from all parts of the valley and arrangements are being made to take care of a large crowd.

Live Oak Grange.

WILSON PARK DEED WAITS ON SALEM

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 22.—(AP)—A deed of transfer is drawn awaiting final action by the Salem city council to convey Wilson park to the state of Oregon, C. A. Sprague, chairman of the Salem capitol committee, told the capitol reconstruction commission today.

He said the Salem committee had been reluctant to suggest where the new capitol should be erected, but the people of Salem always had considered Wilson park the "heart of the civic center" and sentiment had been that its trees and beauty should not be sacrificed and be replaced by "a pile of masonry."

Sprague said he and the other members of the Salem committee were glad the commission's conception presented by Carl F. Gould, architectual adviser, would preserve and expand the beauty of the capitol grounds and building group.

The commission decided against attempting at this time to build a state library, estimated by the planning board to cost approximately $450,000.

MOODY SAYS CAPITOL ACT LIMITS LOCATION

SALEM, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Ranph E. Moody, deputy attorney general, in an informal opinion stated the new state capitol act of the special legislative session limited construction of the new statehouse to land bounded by the old site descriptions.

Moody said he believed the language of the capitol act made it impossible for the commission to plan to erect the new structure anywhere except on ground within the old site.

PINE BEETLE HIT HARD BY COLD IN EASTERN OREGON

For the third time in ten years, a severe cold snap has killed large numbers of the grubs of the western pine beetle in various parts of eastern Oregon, according to studies of the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine in cooperation with the U. S. forest service. Investigation has been made of the effect of the early November cold spell. Grubs winter in the bark of the infested trees, according to the forest service, and develop into beetles in the late spring. The beetles then emerge and attack living ponderosa pine timber. Past experience indicates that the favorable effect of these winter-killings of the grubs is only temporary, perhaps because the beneficial insects or beetle predators also are killed and because frequently an insufficient proportion of the grubs are eliminated by the freeze.

Ponderosa pine destruction by pine beetles in Oregon and Washington during the past five years has exceeded four billion board feet, an amount approximately equal to the pine saw mill cut for the same period and many times the destruction by fire, foresters state. Millions of snags were created by this beetle destruction, resulting in increased fire hazard for years to come.

Control work against the ponderosa pine beetle has recently been completed by some of the timber owners in Crook, Deschutes, Lake and Klamath counties in Oregon, say forest officials. The Indian service is engaging in control activity on a large scale on the Warm Springs Indian reservation. On the Ochoco, Deschutes and Fremont national forests, a total area of approximately 150,000 acres of ponderosa pine is being freed of beetle attacks by CCC labor. Control work consists of cutting the infested trees and peeling and burning the infested bark.

NEW CCC TROOPS FROM MINNESOTA MARVEL AT MINES

CAMP WIMER, Jan. 22.—(Spl.)—Missouri and Kansas members of company 4742, which recently arrived from Minnesota to occupy Wimer, discovered the gold in southern Oregon hills Sunday when Foreman Clifford Hanan conducted a party of 80 men in trucks to visit the Williams Brothers mine north of this camp. The plains men watched Bill Williams tear down a section of a hill with a stream from a "little giant."

The men, being from Missouri, had to be shown that there really was gold in the gravel. The Williams brothers panned some gravel from a test hole and several excited CCC men received colors to carry away as souvenirs. Observers, noting the feverish excitement of some of the men, freely predicted that many shiny new gold pans would be sold in Medford during the next few weeks.

The newcomers smiled at the rain falling when they arrived by special train from the midwest. Minnesota sped their departure with a terrific black blizzard (snow and dirt with a 50-mile gale behind it) and a temperature of 36 below zero. They had been doing forestry liberation work in deep snow near Gun Flint, north of Grand Marais. Rain seemed a very minor annoyance to deep snow seasoned men.

State forestry foremen at Wimer were today preparing to gather up the loose ends of work on the 75-mile system of truck trails and telephone lines. The project has been shut down since Wimer's former company 964 was disbanded and distributed among Camps Bly, Bradford, South Umpqua Falls and Nyssa. Slides on the Ditch creek road, due to the bad weather and absence of work crews, will prevent new construction for some time. Crews were at work today clearing roads for the passage of trucks.

Officers of the new company are Lieut. A. E. Brabec, commanding; Lieut. C. A. Rising and Lieut. L. F. Bach, surgeon. The forestry personnel under Supt. Paul L. Thompson has been retained without change. Lieut. Andrew J. Hemstreet is for the present with the company and Donald Mace, educational adviser.

LITTLE OLD LADY PLODS DAILY TO GRAVE OF FIANCE

Former Tacoma School Teacher Places Flowers Each Day On Grave of Man Dead 52 Years

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 22.—(AP) A little white-haired lady put fresh flowers on a 52-year-old grave in Tacoma cemetery Sunday, keeping a tryst with her fiance of half a century ago.

Every day since 1884, seasonable flowers have nodded over the grave; and every day, except in the stormiest weather, Miss Emma Unthank has seen to it they were in place.

The grave was that of the Rev. Henry S. Bonnell, an Episcopalian clergyman. In 1882, Mr. Bonnell, a tall, eager-eyed young man with the square-cut full beard of his day, came west to the wilderness of Washington territory. A native of St Peter's Episcopal parish, Brooklyn, and protege of Bishop Paddock of that city, he had just graduated from General Theological seminary in New York.

Was Circuit Rider

Here in the northwest he assumed the rectorate of St. Luke's church, Tacoma, and in addition rode a circuit through the valleys of the Puget sound country.

In Tacoma, he met Miss Unthank, then studying to be a school teacher. Petite and dark-haired, she attracted him immediately. They were affianced and the wedding date tentatively set.

Constant rain in the sound country, however, aggravated a lung ailment from which the minister suffered. He contracted tuberculosis, went to California to recuperate and died there in 1884. His body was returned to Tacoma on almost the exact date that had been set for his wedding.

Miss Unthank remained here and became a teacher in the city schools. She continued in this position until a few years ago. Generations of children passed under her tutelage without guessing of her after-school pilgrimages to the cemetery some five miles from her home.

Never Married

She never married.

A few days ago, a curious visitor to the cemetery noticed the flowers on the old grave. Investigating, he learned the whole story from the Rev. E. C. Schmelzer, present rector of the Puyallup church, who was one of the few persons cognizant of Miss Unthank's half century of devotion.

Miss Unthank retired from active teaching some time ago. She and a sister, also unmarried, continued to live together in an old fashioned house.

Rain was threatening in Tacoma today, and few visitors were expected at the cemetery. But attendants waited confidently for the arrival of a sprightly little old lady—she's nearly 75 now—who would surely come with her arms full of flowers for the lover of 52 years ago.

DENNY CONVICTION HAS AFFIRMATION

SALEM, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The Oregon supreme court today upheld the conviction of Edward R. Denny for violation of the state syndicalism law, in a written opinion by Chief Justice J. U. Campbell. The order affirmed the lower court of Multnomah county.

At the same time, in an oral opinion, the court denied the petition for rehearing in a similar case against Dirk DeJonge. Both were indicted at the same time, Denny receiving a sentence of two years and DeJonge seven years in the penitentiary. The court previously upheld the conviction of DeJonge.

The specific charge against the two was "conducting and assisting in conducting an assemblage of persons advocating criminal syndicalism." Denny demanded a separate trial and was sentenced a year ago.
