Good Skating—Clear, sunny skies and good skating conditions prevailed today in the Union Creek area, the local U. S. forest service office was informed by telephone. The snow there is three and a half feet deep and since the highway to Crater Lake national park is closed beyond the Diamond Lake junction forest officials anticipated that a large delegation of sports enthusiasts would spend Sunday on the ski slides provided at Union Creek.

Snowmen Meet Off—Weekly meeting of the Rogus Snowmen scheduled for tonight was postponed a week today by Sam Jennings, president. The meeting was deferred, Mr. Jennings said, because Crater Lake highway is still closed between Diamond Lake junction and the west entrance to Crater Lake national park. Considerable confusion has been caused by conflicting reports regarding clearing of the highway. It was announced last Saturday that a state rotary plow had arrived on the scene, but later the report was found to be erroneous. Yesterday it was stated again the plow had arrived but such was found not to be the case. Today A. H. Banwell, manager of the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce, called James Bromley, resident engineer of the state highway commission in Grants Pass, for authoritative information and was told the plow would arrive on the scene today, but later Mr. Jennings was informed by road men at Union Creek that the plow had broken down in Ashland and it would be at least a week before the road could be opened. Meantime, roads within Crater Lake national park are being kept open.

"Medford" Published—A clipping from the Pacific Coast Packer was received today by A. S. Roebenbaum, district passenger and freight agent of the Southern Pacific railroad, from F. W. The clipping, under a Chicago date-line, told of the Chicago baby who was named after Medford, the name having been found on the wrapper of a Rague valley pear.

Model Airport—A model of the Medford municipal airport has been constructed in the window of Sims Brothers' lock, gun and bicycle shop on North Fir street. The numerous airplane models forming part of the display were built from toy kits by Robert Guffel, 860 North Central avenue, and Edgar and Raymond Sims, 121 Genesee street. The airport was modeled with faithful attention to details.

PARIS—(UP)—The major literary prizes of the year have been awarded, and with them a fair sprinkling of the little ones—such as that awarded by the traveling salesmen and the prize for the best book about football—and the usual controversy is under way concerning the merits of the decisions. The general verdict seems to be that the decisions were pretty bad—worse than the books.

Chief among changed opinions is the dwindling respect for the Goncourt prize, which is rapidly going the way of the French Academy award which once was an author's great ambition, but now it has come to be considered almost a demerit, as marking a writer with the brand of stiffness and ultra-conservatism. The Goncourt prize had allowed the Academy prize out of first place in popular consideration, but in the last few years there has been a feeling that it is likely to go to the year's second or third best book instead of the first, and this year's choice seems to have confirmed that idea.

Humorists in the last few years have suggested regularly that in view of the increasing number of prizes, all of which are followed by heavy advertising for the winners, that some publisher should advertise a book that hasn't won a prize. If he can find one. The Nouvelle Revue Française is doing just about that by advertising that "Le Sang Noir" by Louis Guilloux did not win the Goncourt prize. The advertisement quotes two reviews written before the award, one by Henry Bidou of the Journal des Debats which reads: "It is evident that the book of M. Guilloux is superior to the others... That is no reason for it to win the Goncourt prize," and the other by Andre Billy in Oeuvre: "An authentic descendant of Voltaire and Dostoevsky... It would be surprising if the book takes the Goncourt prize." Below the publishers add, "And as a matter of fact 'Le Sang Noir' did not win the Goncourt prize."

"Le Sang Noir" took only one vote against Joseph Perre's "Sang et Lumiere," a bullfight novel which would have been more startling if it had preceded Ibsen's "Blood and Sand" and Hemingway's "Death in the Afternoon" instead of following them. Four votes went to Maxence Van der Meer's "Invasion 14," a long and powerful novel of the German invasion of Flanders, which most commentators considered better than either the winning book or "Le Sang Noir."

Van der Meer, who at the age of 28 has six excellent books to his credit, drew upon his own youthful experiences in the invaded region, produced a volume which is calculated to be displeasing to academicians because it presents human beings as sharply in the path of a storm due to cut over Wyoming, northeastern Colorado, most of Kansas, north-eastern Oklahoma, Texas and Louis-

Dick Powell to Head Craterian Cast

Dick Powell sings the famous old sea classic, "Abdul Anubub Amir" and the beloved "Anchors Aweigh" as well as several other new songs in "Shipmates Forever" coming Sunday to the Craterian theater, in which Powell is co-starred with Ruby Keeler in a story of Annapolis. Glamorous sequences have been taken, with the Academy as a background, the film company having spent more than a month at Annapolis to get the real setting. Other dramatic sequences were "shot" on board the U.S.S. Pennsylvania, flagship of the Pacific fleet, under the technical direction of naval officers.

More than a thousand cadets take part in the Annapolis scenes while as many more officers and men of the navy work with the screen players aboard the Pennsylvania. The traditional customs of the naval academy are all woven into the romantic and exciting plot which soars in suspense to the breath-taking climax when Powell dashes through flame and scalding steam to rescue a shipmate and thereby winning a bride.

There is a talented supporting cast in the picture, including Lewis Stone, Boss Alexander, Richard (Dick) Foran, Eddie Acuff, John Arledge and Mary Treen. The southeast was already freezing. It was zero in Kentucky and 34 above at Jacksonville, Fla. The Midwest was promised a heavy snow days' relief with a heavy snow being the mercury swung up from minus 17.1 to zero and then down again to 14 below at 8 a. m., looked for 15 above before nightfall. The cold eased up in the east, but many communities remained snowbound. A milk shortage developed in upstate New York as a result of drifts piled up by the worst blizzard since 1888.

Kay Francis Coming in Rialto Hit

Kay Francis, supported by a talented cast, comes to the Rialto theater Sunday for a three-day run in the leading role of "I Found Stella Parrish."

An intensely emotional drama of a famous stage actress who topples from the heights of success to the depths of despair while trying to expatriate who had added their savings to his original stake. Having met and fallen in love with Joan Bennett, hired by the gambling syndicate to lure Colman back to Monte Carlo for another session at the tables, he uses his fortune in pursuit of her. She and her companion in deceit, Colin Clive, lead Colman a merry chase through the gay centers of Europe to Inter-laken, Switzerland. Here, in a setting of moonlight and romance, Miss Bennett falls in love with her victim. She tries to save Colman, but Clive manages to get him back to Monte Carlo. Colman loses his winnings, but wins Miss Bennett, much to the satisfaction of both principals and to the audience.
