

ROOSEVELT PENS BRIEF MESSAGE OF DISAPPROVAL

referred senators and representatives "respectfully . . . to every word of what I said" in last year's veto of a currency-expansion bonus payment bill.

"My convictions are so compelling today as they were then," the president said. "Therefore I can not change them."

Mr. Roosevelt added: "The bill I now return differs from last year's bill in only two important respects: First, it eliminates the issuance of unsecured paper currency to make the payments required and substitutes interest-bearing bonds, which, however, may be converted into cash for face value at any time; second, it adds $293,000,000 to the total payments by forgiving interest after October 1, 1931, on . . ."

Facts Remain Same. "In all other respects, the circumstances, arguments and facts remain essentially the same as those fully covered and explained by me only eight months ago."

Indicative of the determination on Capitol Hill to make the bill law, despite the veto was the comment of Senator Clark (D., Mo.) one of the authors: "We'll pass it over his veto."

One pertinent phrase from last year's veto measure which Mr. Roosevelt evidently had in mind today was: "The credit of the United States is safe, but it can not ultimately be safe if we engage in a policy of yielding to each and all of the groups that are able to enforce upon the congress claims for special consideration."

Written in Longhand. White House aides said Mr. Roosevelt broke precedent of a quarter of a century and sent his message to Capitol Hill in his own handwriting. Up to the time of the administration of Theodore Roosevelt all messages to congress were written in longhand. But none has gone to the capitol in longhand since then. While the veto did not come as a surprise, the manner of its sudden transmission to congress today upset some calculations.

Earlier in the day at a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt had smilingly declined to discuss the bonus. The senate last year upheld the veto after the house had overridden the personally presented plea of the president against the legislation.

Heiress Impresses in Testimony Accusing Mother and Doctors

JUDGE COMPLIMENTS ANN COOPER HEWITT AFTER QUESTIONING

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24.—(P)—A judge who complimented Ann Cooper Hewitt on her bearing as a witness debated today whether he should issue criminal complaints against those involved in her bizarre sterilization.

For almost an hour, the 21-year-old heiress, rated at only 11 years mentally by a city psychologist, answered questions concerning the operation which resulted in her filing a $500,000 damage suit against her mother and two doctors.

The girl replied with an emphatic "most certainly not" when asked if she would have given her consent to the operation if asked for it. She said she was led to believe it was to be an appendectomy.

Wonderful Witness. "You are a wonderful witness," said Municipal Judge Sylvian J. Lazarus at the close of the unique hearing. "It isn't often we have people here who testify as clearly and as intelligently as you have."

The hearing, called under a rarely used California law, was to determine whether criminal charges should be filed against Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter, the girl's mother; Samuel G. Boyd, who performed the operation August 18, 1934, and Dr. Tilton E. Tillman, diagnostician in the case.

Miss Hewitt's attorney would not let her sign mayhem complaints, and the district attorney would not issue them without her signature, so the matter was put up to the court by the prosecutor. Judge Lazarus said he would announce his decision next Tuesday. Miss Hewitt, daughter of the late inventor, Peter Cooper Hewitt, charged her mother engineered the operation so she could forever control the Cooper fortune because the daughter would be childless. The estate has been estimated to total all the way from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000.

No Defense Testimony. Testimony at the criminal court hearing was all on Miss Hewitt's side. Judge Lazarus announced he would not permit testimony by the three accused persons, although they might submit affidavits if they wished.

Miss Hewitt, a tiny figure in the witness chair, told how she had suffered severe abdominal pains which led to an examination by Dr. Tillman.

"He looked at me and said he guessed I should have my appendix removed," she said in response to questions of Assistant Prosecutor August Fournier.

"At no time did either Dr. Tillman or Dr. Boyd take my temperature, feel my pulse or take a blood count." Miss Hewitt testified she was examined by the psychologist, Mrs. Mary Scally, who represented herself as a nurse.

"Did she announce she was giving you a mental test?" Fournier asked. "No. But I asked her why she was asking me so many routine questions, particularly when I was in such pain."

The girl then told how she had corrected Mrs. Scally in pronunciation of a word in French, a language which the heiress speaks fluently.

Cost Her Points. "Never dispute a psychiatrist," remarked Judge Lazarus. "She probably marked you down a couple of points for that."

Anne B. Lindsay, a nurse who attended Miss Hewitt, said Dr. Boyd had asked her to take the case two days before the operation, indicating it would involve a moron.

Ann Cooper Hewitt (above), whose $500,000 suit against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter, which charged she had been deprived of her power of motherhood without her knowledge or consent while undergoing an appendicitis operation, caused San Francisco authorities to investigate circumstances of the operation. PHYSICIANS UNITE IN SERVICE PLAN

For the benefit of local employers and employees the Southern Oregon Medical Service association was recently organized by more than 20 Rogue River valley physicians, providing protection in case of sickness or injury. Headquarters have been established in the Medford Center building with Frank Hull as business manager.

The Southern Oregon Medical Service association, which is strictly home owned and operated by physicians of this valley, offers the following services to its members: Medical and surgical service; immediate service in emergency; elimination of red tape delays; competent dental service; X-ray service; physical therapy; ambulance service and prophylactic measures.

Under the provisions of the new association the financial burden of a prolonged illness or surgical operation is lessened, medical attention being assured by qualified physicians and surgeons.

POOL SENTENCED ON GUILTY PLEA

Louis Andrew Pool, on parole on a check forgery charge, was sentenced to not less than two years in state prison yesterday on a plea of guilty.

Theodore B. Medley, also named in the complaint against Pool, was granted a suspended sentence by Circuit Judge H. D. Norton when it was shown he was a victim of circumstances and association with Pool.

Pool was arrested a month ago when he returned to this city. The district attorney reports he has a police record in California. At the time of his last arrest here he was on a parole from a two years' sentence for forgery granted in this county.

THICK FOG CONTINUES TO ENVELOP VALLEY

The regular semi-monthly dance and social will be held after tonight's business meeting of the Eagles and auxiliary in the fraternal's hall on West Main street. Dyke's orchestra will furnish the music. The public is invited.

The business meeting which convenes at 8 o'clock will consider several important matters, said A. H. Banwell, aerie president who asked for a full attendance.

Pomona Grange

Pomona Grange. Jackson County Pomona Grange will meet at the K. P. hall in Medford, corner of Grape and Sixth streets, Saturday January 25, at 10 a. m. In an all-day meeting, being entertained by the Rocky Ann Grange.

It is expected that the Josephine county Grange committee will meet with the Jackson County Pomona rural electrification district committee at this meeting and that primary steps will be formulated for the creation of such a district of Josephine and Jackson counties.

No doubt much information on this question will be available. There are 15 Granges in the county now and a large attendance and membership from all these Granges in the Pomona will result in a strong unified program for the county and state.

VOORHIES TELLS OF MEXICO TRIP

The account of his trip to Mexico, and motion pictures showing the life of the people, given by A. E. Voorhies, editor and publisher of the Grants Pass Courier, were greatly enjoyed by those present for the "fireside hour" at the Presbyterian church last evening. A pleasing feature was a group of Spanish songs by Mrs. Dolores Spurling.

Camera club members, who were guests of the evening, met after the address. T. J. Radcliff spoke of the relation of exposure to development of bromide prints. A. M. Sorenson, lately a member of the Oregon Camera club, told of his experiences with miniature camera work. He will bring material and demonstrate enlarging from miniature negatives for the February meeting.

Gasoline Stations Must Bar Drunks
OLYMPIA, Wash., Jan. 24.—(AP)—The city commission today had placed much of the burden on the retail gasoline salesman in its attempt to eliminate drunken driving in Olympia, the state capital and eventually in the entire state.

Gasoline sales to drunken drivers became unlawful in the city with the adoption of an ordinance making such an act a misdemeanor, punishable by $100 fine, or 30 days in jail, or both.
