Paul Muni Coming in "Dr. Socrates"

Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak and Barton MacLane, the big three that made "Scarface" famous as motion picture history, are reunited in a new picture by the same author, "Dr. Socrates," coming to the Rialto theater Sunday.

Muni plays the role of Dr. Socrates, a young surgeon who pits his scientific knowledge against the brute strength and guns of a gang of racketeers.

Brokers were not in agreement as to just how much inflation sentiment had to do with the rally. Many stocks, such as the utilities, which have never been classed as inflationary hedges, were in the forefront of the forward push.

The French franc, however, moved briskly against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings, getting up around 6.89 1/2 cents, or above the point where gold can be shipped profitably from America, for the first time since September 8, 1934.

"Captain Blood" Opens Sunday

English village patriots sold as slaves, rebels and become pirates in the persons of Guy Kibbee (center), David Torrence and Robert Barrat in the million dollar production of adventure on the high seas, "Captain Blood," opening Sunday at the Craterian theater.

This thrilling tale of seventeenth century sea pirates is said to be one of the most elaborate and pretentious productions in screen history.

Intense Action in Craterian Picture

Intense in its action, in exciting episodes, in its flaming color and picture sequences, "Frisco Kid" opened yesterday at the Craterian theater.

Set on the Barbary Coast of old San Francisco in the early fifties, it is a story of the tumultuous gold rush days when adventurers from the world over congregated on Frisco's waterfront.
