HOLLIS PINS DUDE FOR ODD FALL IN HECTIC GRAPPLE

"The best matches since the battle royal" was the almost unanimous opinion of Medford fans last night at the Armory, when Dude Chick permitted Ken Hollis to take an extra five minutes to recover from an early lariat spin, and then lost the match to the obstreperous Arkansas hoodlum in the third frame.

Because Hollis failed to observe any of the rules of ordinary ring decency, Chick became angry when the bout was but six minutes old, bounced Hollis off the ropes, and spun him into dizzy unconsciousness to take the first fall. Unable to return, Hollis' seconds and Referee Frisbie asked Chick to grant extra time. Promoter Mack Lillard added his entreaties to the others, and the bout continued in 10 minutes.

In the next round Chick tried four times to hoist Hollis into another spin, but the Arkansan displayed remarkable agility in leaping over the ropes.

Using a combination kicking and slugging attack, Hollis finally managed to choke Chick enough to be able to get him into a Boston crab, Chick being forced to thump the sailcloth.

In the last frame, Chick shifted his attack from the spin attempt to flying shoulder butts. Four times he hurtled up under Hollis' body and nearly heaved him out of the ring, but on the fourth attempt his hand slipped off as Hollis grabbed the rope. Chick staggered backward from the force and fell on his back, Hollis diving on him to pin him for the deciding vote.

In the middle main event Bob Kennaston unleashed one of the most perfectly timed drop kicks seen here in months to knock Frank Taylor woozy in the first second of their Australian system match. Six more drop-kicks reduced Taylor to helplessness and Kennaston took the first fall in one minute with a body press.

Taylor took a fall in the third when he side-stepped another vicious drop kick from Kennaston and then leaped on the ex-marine for a body press. The last frame went to Taylor when he sewed Kennaston up in a reversed rolling body press after the two had abandoned wrestling for straight slugging.

The opening, all-meanie bout between Max Glover and Tiger Taskoff was a riot from start to finish. Taskoff won.

Taskoff took the first fall with a hammerlock, Glover getting the next with a "jackknife", or octopus hold. His attempt to apply it again in the last round rebounded when Taskoff flopped over on top of him, pinning his shoulders.

CAGE FUNDAMENTALS ARE DEMONSTRATED BY FAMOUS PLAYER

A demonstration of the fundamentals of basketball playing was given at the Senior high school yesterday by Chuck Taylor, nationally known professional basketbal star from the old Celtic team of New York. Over a hundred embryo players, from every public school in the city, watched the explanation of the proper technique in ball handling, primary scoring maneuvers, guarding and floor work.

Emphasizing balance and deception, Taylor put on a remarkable exhibition of clever floor work, and explained the fundamental principle underlying his system. The ex-pro player used members of the Medford high school team to demonstrate his plays, and pointed out ways of gaining an advantage over opponents who are not alert to every line of defense.

After the demonstration, Taylor attempted three trick shots, failing by inches to bounce the ball into the net while standing on the center line. Tossing the ball high in the air, he watched it come down in the center of the foul ring, bounce to the backboard, and roll off the edge of the ring. He repeated his demonstrations before the Ashland schools, including the Southern Oregon Normal, last night.

Seattle Skaters Grab League Lead

VANCOUVER, B. C., Feb. 4.—(AP)—The Seattle Seahawks, seven weeks ago the cellar-dwellers of the Northwestern Hockey league, today had fulfilled their long-promised threat and were enjoying the coveted spot in the league standings by a one-point margin.

The Vancouver Lions and the Portland Buckaroos, who for weeks have been scrapping over the league leadership, were passed en route here last night as the Hawks came through for a 5 to 2 victory over the Lions.

The Medford high school football team plays Ashland here on Armistic day, according to the tentative schedule that has been drawn up. The Armistice day spot is considered the second best of the year, bowing in popularity only to Thanksgiving. Coach Bowerman and Principal Smith of Medford were anxious to sign Klamath Falls for the Armistice game, a maneuver which would have packed the stands at VanScoyoc field, but Klamath already had a tentative assignment to play Bend.

With the bickerings that went on after last year's Klamath game, and hot words hurled across the mountain, that Klamath game this fall is going to draw fans from all over southern Oregon. If both teams prove strong in their early season encounters, all attendance records will probably be shattered. The two teams play here on October 31.

Medford was careful this year to sign their league games early in the season. This, according to Bowerman, will give the locals a chance to sign up-state teams toward the end of the year. With prospects for a great football team next year, the move is obviously pointed toward elimination of the situation that resulted this year several teams, all claiming the state title and with no chance to settle the dispute except in the newspapers.

Medford's chances of nabbing some of the basketbal honors when they meet Ashland for the last two games of the four-game series are improving rapidly. Ashland has lost the services of Parker Hess and Medford has gained the services of Sam VanDyke, both men being big factors on their respective teams.

Ashland is going to miss Hess. A god athlete and a good sport, Hess was not spectacular in his play, but he always managed to be at the point where he could do the most good. He had the valuable faculty of forgetting himself, and feeding shots to a teammate rather than trying to amass all the points himself.

If you were at the last Medford-Ashland basketball game in Ashland a few days ago, you undoubtedly saw the battery of police they had on hand, both in uniform and in plain clothes. That seems pointedly foolish to us. The psychological reaction is bound to be exactly the opposite of that which is desired. If troops of national guardsmen were stationed around the doors when the teams play here, the result would naturally be that Ashland rooters would feel obligated to put up some show of resentment, and the result would be a fight. The same result is achieved by the stationing of cops. After all, there has been no show of poor sportsmanship between the schools for a number of years. There is no reason to assume that the silly warfare of past years will be resumed, unless such contributing factors are continued.

Last night's wrestling card at the Armory was the best one in some months. For sheer action, excitement, thrills and assault, it topped any we have ever seen. And the nearness of a riot, that which the Medford crowds seem so dearly to love, added just the right tinge of spice.

CLIMATE BOWLERS DEFEAT MEDFORD

GRANTS PASS, Feb. 4.—(Spl.)—In one of the closest, hardest fought bowling battles fought on the Grants Pass alleys, the Rogues took retaliation against the Medford bowling quintet here Sunday when they won a five-game match with 4493 pins to 4477 pins.

Grants Pass took the first game by one pin, Medford took the second by six pins, then the margins increased widely with Medford taking two of the three remaining matches. But total pins went to the locals by 16 pins, breaking the 3-3 tie in Grants Pass' favor.

Scores by games:

Grants Pass:
897, 842, 942, 910, 102. Total 4493.

Medford:
896, 849, 869, 935, 929. Total 4477.

John Spooner of the Rogues took high place with a total of 999 pins—just one pin under an average of 200 per game. Franklin of Medford shot a 194 average to place second.

Scores by players were:

Grants Pass — Frank Rengstorff, 864; Cecil Harmon, 898; Pete Smith, 826; John Spooner, 999; Dick Miller, 876.

Medford—Antle, 869; Saylor, 914; Daly, 779; Franklin, 971; Ends, 944.

CHEMAWA QUINT TO PLAY TIGERS FRIDAY, SATURDAY

Still smarting from a sound 33-0 thumping handed their football team last fall, 10 braves from the Chemawa Indian school stalk into southern Oregon this week-end to pit their erratic, in-and-out basketball team against the Medford Tigers, Friday and Saturday nights.

With a team that so far this year has reached great heights in brilliant passing and floor work only to slump unexplainedly the next week, the Indians are expected to prove a tough hurdle for the locals if they're "on." Chemawa teams almost invariably play their best game of the season against Medford, particularly in basketball.

Still dissatisfied with the failure of his team's fast break to do just that, Coach Bill Bowerman is this week confining his drill to that phase of the game. The passing and floor work has improved, Bowerman said today, but admitted that there is still room for lots of improvement in those departments.

The rushing, driving game that characterized the local's attack in early season games but which was markedly absent against Ashland, is once again in evidence and the Tigers will rely strongly on speed down the home stretch to wear down the usually short Indians.

For the first time this year it is expected that the Medford team will be playing against a team of approximately the same size. The short, swift Indians have always employed a fast break and a whip-like, overhead passing attack and the Medford team is working on defenses against the system.

Whether the varsity team or the sophomore reserves play most of the game depends entirely on their performances in practice sessions this week, Bowerman indicated today. The seniors, with all the advantage of height, are being hard pressed by the tricky little sophomore team, the squad that will have to take over the spartan duties next year.

If, when they are sent into the Chemawa game, the sophomores prove that they can hold their own, they will be left in the fray to gain experience, the coach said.

HUSKIES WALLOP OREGON STATERS TO TUNE OF 51-33

CORVALLIS, Ore., Feb. 4.—(AP)—The Washington Huskies appeared to be firmly entrenched atop the Pacific Coast basketball circuit's northern division today that little short of a miracle will deprive them of the season's honors.

The Huskies last night forgot all about Oregon State being the defending champions and hung up their seventh consecutive conference victory by handing the Beavers a 51 to 33 walloping.

The Staters by no means were out of the battle but the Huskies' speed and unerring eye were just too much. Several times in the final half the Beavers crept up to within five and six points of the leaders, but with the score at 35 to 29 the Washington quintet laid down a barrage which ended only when their score was one less than 50.

The two teams will play again tonight, Washington won four straight from Oregon and took two from Washington State prior to the invasion of Corvallis. The Beavers were conceded the only hope of halting the victory march.

START EXCAVATION FOR GYM AT NORMAL

ASHLAND, Feb. 4.—(Spl.)—Signs of activity at the site of the new Southern Oregon Normal school gymnasium were seen Monday as contractors began work on the structure.

The actual position of the building was determined, which necessitates the elimination of one of the groves of trees west of the building.

Corners of the building were marked off, and some excavation was done by the crew of Shattuck and Neland, Portland contractors in charge of the job, which is expected to require four months for completion.

Has his own ideas about a Smokin' Tobacco!

THE HAWKINS BOYS, Roy and Jesse, in a cozy corner of the kitchen. They're cleaning up the rifle for a little shooting. And they're having some fun right now—because do you know what's in those pipes? Prince Albert! "I'm here to tell you that there's only one 'national joy smoke'—Prince Albert," says Roy. "The P.A. cut is different—each P.A. pipeful burns slower and tastes cooler. I'd advise any pipe lover to take up that Prince Albert proposition of money back if not satisfied. Me, I'm pleased as can be!"

DOWN BY THE POST OFFICE. Jesse got some mail! Roy's smiling because he has just stocked up on Prince Albert. "It is easy to tell from the taste," he says, "that Prince Albert comes from extra-quality tobaccos. And the fine flavor of mild, mellow tobaccos is protected by a special 'bite removing' process that P. A. uses."

(Left) ROY REMEMBERS WELL how he got that one. Had his pipe and Prince Albert along too, because he has smoked Prince Albert for at least ten years. "I found a pleasant surprise," he remembers, "the first time I opened one of those big red tins. What mellow aroma!"

YES, SIR, FIFTY PIPEFULS! (Right) "You'll be surprised how much more tobacco you get in those big economy tins," says Roy. "They hold around fifty pipefuls." Men, read the you-must-be-pleased offer. Try America's favorite tobacco entirely at our risk.
