Pope Depressed By Continued War

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Vatican prelates said today Pope Pius was "mentally tremendously depressed" over continuance of the Italian-Ethiopian war, despite his desire for peace, and the confused dangers of the European situation.

This mental depression, even more than physical tiredness, led the pontiff to cancel his public audiences yesterday, although he resumed them today, the prelates said.

Debate Delayed

It had been planned to begin floor debate today on the Bankhead combination temporary-permanent AAA replacement bill, but Smith said the committee wanted a "chance to study" the changes made by the house agriculture committee in a similar bill introduced by Jones.

Principal revisions made by the house committee, as compared with the senate text, were: Broadening of the objectives to include expansion of foreign and domestic markets and disposition of surpluses.

Transfer from the two-year temporary subsidy section to the permanent state-aid provisions of policy aims directed at maintenance of a stable flow of farm commodities at prices fair to both producers and consumers, and reestablishment and maintenance of farm purchasing power.

Authorization for expenditures to eradicate tuberculosis among dairy cattle.

Authority to use state and local committees in administering both the temporary and permanent plans.

Under the vocational education bill of Senator George (D. Ga.), states would not be required to match more than 50 per cent of the federal allotments prior to July 1, 1940, and not more than 75 per cent in each subsequent year.

VAN VLACK RAGES AT PROSECUTOR IN TRIAL FOR MURDER

yesterday when cross examination was resumed today and the attorney general was compelled to drag his replies from the witness.

Van Vlack admitted having signed a sworn statement admitting the killing of the two officers. Asked what the first question was, he replied: "It's a bunch of hooey."

He admitted having sworn that when he took Mildred he knew what the Washington penalty for kidnapping was and that when he saw the officers he knew he would be arrested for that crime.

Hidelines Question They stopped at a service station after shooting the officers the defendant testified, but when Miller asked if they tried to get food, he replied: "That's a ridiculous question. You can't get food at a service station."

When the attorney general reminded him some gas stations carry food, he wanted to know why Miller did not ask questions "with some point."

"You want the jury to understand that you don't remember anything about following the railroad track?" the attorney general inquired.

"Yes." He said he remembered lying in a culvert and in a straw or hay stack once. He made no mention of separating from Mildred.

"What was the last distinct recollection you have on your trip through the fields?" "Crossing a canal."

The defendant obviously was badly upset when his grilling cross examination was concluded and Judge Adam B. Barclay directed that a recess be taken.

Synthetic Radium Made By Savants

BERKELEY, Calif., Feb. 4.—(AP)—Another great achievement in transmutation of the elements—synthetic creation of a form of radium—was credited today to University of California Radiation laboratory.

But, scientists were quick to add, the magical creation of riches from cheap metals is as impossible for this ultra-modern scientific laboratory as it was for the glowing furnaces of the middle ages where alchemists tried to transmute lead into gold.

Report to Doctor The report was made to Dr. B. E. Shoemaker, former county health officer and physician for the Marsters child, who was named by Coroner H. C. Stearns to conduct the autopsy.

Dr. Shoemaker declined to make known the contents of the report, but placed it before District Attorney Hallmark, who held a telephone conversation with technicians at the Eugene laboratory before making definite announcement of the cause of the child's death.

Sheriff Percy Webb and his force of deputies, and Corporal Paul Parsons, in charge of the Roseburg division of the state police were immediately called into conference with the district attorney to plan a search for the dog poisoner.
