On Rialto Bill

Two new and different Edmund Lewes will be seen at the Rialto theater in "The Great Impersonation" where it plays today and Thursday.
In the exciting exposure of what goes on behind the scenes of war preparations, Lewes plays two roles. And a monologue is almost his sole means of study in differentiating between the two. Best known for his portrayal of fast-talking, wise-cracking scapegoats, he is neither in this dramatization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's famous novel.
Lewes plays the ominous Leopold von Hagenstein, international adventurer willing to take any man's life for love or money—or for love of a woman. He is first seen hiding in German East Africa, while his employer, an unscrupulous multimillionaire, seeks to "hit" a murder charge. Lewes is also Everard Dornay, an alcoholic Englishman, who drifts downward from power to worthlessness. What happens when the two, who were once college chums, meet in Africa constitutes one of the most surprising motion pictures ever conceived.
Valerie Hobson and Wera Engles play the women in the lives of these two counterparts. Others in the cast are Henry Mollison, Spring Byington, Henry Kolker and Esther Dale.

Barbara Stanwyck Here Thursday

The most famous rifle shot ever known is brought to life on the screen starting tomorrow at the Criterion theater with the showing of "Annie Oakley," starring Barbara Stanwyck in the role of the sharp-shooting star of Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Indian Show.
On the same program with "Annie Oakley" will be "The Day After Tomorrow," starring Sully Prunty, filmed entirely in Technicolor. "Three Orphan Kittens,"

Winters, world-traveling baker, will be in Medford the remainder of the week instructing and demonstrating for bakers in Fluhrer's bakeries. It was Mr. Winters' first trip by air, he stated, that, although the new experience was enjoyable, he thinks it doesn't agree with him as well as ordinary travel. Mr. Winters also stated that during his stay here he will be very glad to independently advise any Medford housewife on baking problems, and that anyone interested is invited to consult with him at Fluhrer's bakery.

WAR TENSION HIGH IN EUROPE NOW IS BRYANTS WARNING

Bryant asked questions of the audience and also answered a number of questions.
The speaker's main thesis was that the only hope to prevent another world war and resulting chaos, was through education of the people and their enlightenment as to the real facts of the world situation that must be faced. He particularly stressed the folly of yielding to prejudice, which can only result in misunderstandings, pleas for freedom of speech, freedom of discussion and a realistic attitude toward the world situation, not as we might like it to be, but as it really is.
In the speaker's opinion a real spiritual faith, as well as courageous and aggressive leadership must be marshaled behind the effort to end war and bring world peace.
Until some international organization, however, generally supported by all the world powers and properly implemented in functioning, a nation like the United States should have an adequate army and navy
