

CARS OF LUXURY BECOME POPULAR IN GREAT BRITAIN

American Influence Puts Midget Models in Background—High Tax Cost Is Overcome by Comfort

LONDON—(UP)—British automobile manufacturers, faced with a flood of six and eight-cylinder "luxury" cars from the United States have scouted the bugaboo of high motoring taxes and are producing an array of larger and finer models.

Henry Ford can be credited to a large extent for this revolutionary trend in the British industry. Years ago the British government identified the owner of a motor car as a man of superfluous wealth well able to pay a tax on his luxurious living.

Small Cars Appear. Auto makers, seeking volume sales, responded by concentrating on small but ordinarily efficient cars. The streets were filled with lilliputian four-cylinder cars of about seven horsepower.

These small cars also gave the motorist relief from the high cost of gasoline in England—about twice the price in the United States because of heavy taxation.

The British tax on tiny seven-horsepower cars is about $26 a year, not including license and compulsory second and third party liability insurance.

In the United States, meanwhile, engineers developed low-priced six-cylinder models of about 20 horsepower for around $500 and four-cylinder cars became a rarity on the highways.

Then Ford stepped into the British picture. Two years ago he introduced into Great Britain his eight-cylinder model, listed at about $1250 and capable of 80 miles an hour, to the amazement of British motorists. Its body was spacious and beautifully outfitted.

Taxes Reduced Some. Many English people, ignoring its high tax and comparatively heavy gasoline consumption, purchased this model, thereby creating a new vogue which British manufacturers were challenged to meet.

The government eventually made a reduction in automobile taxes and the United States responded with several models of 30 and 25 horsepower, six-cylinder cars selling in England for slightly more than $1500.

The prices were higher than for the same cars in the United States because of tariff, freight, insurance and middlemen's expense.

American-British competition began on a real scale with Lord Nuttfield launching four new types of Morris six-cylinder cars. Ford responded with a smaller model of 22 horsepower, carrying a British tax of $82.50.

The whole industry began to take notice of this new competition and began to join it, one by one, realizing that tax and fuel consumption were not the stumbling blocks they once had been.

American Influence Prevails. The recent international motor show at Olympia revealed the rapid Americanization of Britain's automobiles, insofar as size and speed and horsepower are concerned.

"If we are compelled by sheer necessity to admit that the original inspiration for these new models is largely transatlantic we can say that the copyist unquestionably has improved on the prototype," one maker said.

The larger English cars mean higher operating costs, but salesmen have found that the additional cost of a 20 or 25 horsepower car is not so great as to obscure its merits of speed, comfort and silence with the buyer.

Buyers have been made to realize that the large engines, rarely worked to capacity, have an endurance not to be found in the tiny runabouts and may be expected to last, with benefit of reasonably good care, for 10 years or more.

One of the most frequently seen examples of the new British "luxury" cars is a 21-horsepower model, carrying a tax of about $70, accommodating five passengers and done in excellent leather upholstery. The car has a speed of 80 miles an hour.

Reclamation Chief Given Promotion. KIAMATH FALLS, Feb. 7.—(AP)—B. F. Hayden, superintendent of the Kiamath reclamation project, today announced his promotion following his return from Washington.

Hayden will supervise reclamation work in district five, which includes the Yuma and Gila projects in Arizona, Salt River project in Utah, the Rio Grande project in Texas and New Mexico and the Caribbean project in New Mexico.

He will continue to maintain headquarters here. Individually designed Spencer dress and surgical garments Mrs. H. M. Weisbar Phone 1221-R

FOUR CONVICTS MAKE GETAWAY

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 7.—(AP)—Four armed convicts walked to freedom from the main entrance of Frankfort state reformatory early today after overpowering two guards and looting the prison arsenal.

The gang, three of them life-termers, hijacked a taxicab at the gate and made their getaway before the break was discovered by prison officials.

James Morris, 27, Achorage, Ky., life-term bank robber who led an escape of five convicts last May, was one of the four who escaped, and was believed to be the leader.

The others were Dexter Anderson, 23, and Henry Coomer, 22, both life-term murderers; and Clarence Crawford, 26, whose sentences for forgery and for an escape last August totaled 13 years.

Lake Creek

LAKE CREEK, Feb. 7.—(Sp.)—Mrs. Gould of Red Bluff, Cal., is making an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. E. E. Meyer, and family.

J. VanDorff and wife of Medford were guests Tuesday of their daughter, Mrs. William Hoefis and family.

The election Friday passed off without much excitement, although there was a better than 50 percent vote. Mrs. Margaret Nuasbaum and Laura Hughes spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hughes and T. R. Hughes.

Fern Valley

FERN VALLEY, Feb. 7.—(Sp.)—Out of the twenty-three pupils in school there were only nine present Wednesday. Those with colds were Muriel, Ruth Norman and Gordon Williams; Josephine and Dorothea Kantor; Robert Lewis, Roy Donald Cobald, Marjorie and Marion Pernas. Those with measles or in quarantine are Jimmie Davis, Levita, Evelyn, Leonard and Lloyd Pernas. Ardath Sprinell returned the first of the week after being out with measles.

Barbara Kantor is staying at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kantor, this week. Joyce Marshall celebrated her sixth birthday with a party Saturday afternoon. Her guests were Josephine and Dorothea Kantor, Muriel and Ruth Williams, Evelyn Jean Watkins, Lovella Long, Patricia Marshall, Robert Duane, Ernest Lee Beer, Donald Long, Jr., and Norman and Gordon Williams.
