

HIGHWAY IS BUILT IN 'QUAKING BOG' BY CCC WORKERS

MARLINTON, W. Va.—(UP)—Cranberry Glades, West Virginia's scenic wonder which heretofore has been a veritable wilderness, is open to tourist travel through completion by CCC workers of a road from Richwood, W. Va., through the glades, and on to Marlinton, civilian conservation corps officials announce.

Cranberry Glades, situated in the high region of western Pocahontas county, containing some 300 to 400 acres of dense forest which abound in game. Within the glade there are five open spaces, the largest being about 25 acres. Each open space is separated from the others by winding, sluggish streams.

The area, known as the "wilderness of Pocahontas county," is drained by hundreds of clear, trout laden mountain brooks that flow into the Cranberry, Gauley, Elk and Williams rivers.

It is said there is no area of equal extent in West Virginia that is of greater importance for its influence on water flow than the Cranberry Glades which lay in an elevation of 3400 feet above the sea and are surrounded by mountains rising from 1000 to 1300 feet.

Of never-ending sources of delight to the tourist, and more so to the student and collector, are the varied forms of plant and animal life. Two thousand varieties of orchids bloom in colorful contrast upon the metallic sheen of the moss carpet. As many as 32 orchids have been counted in a square foot.

Natives call the area the "quaking bog" for the ground quivers and shakes for rods around when some one walks on it. This is caused by the top carpet of mosses resting upon soft mire of about 20 feet deep.

Everyday Cooking Miracles

BY FRANCES WEEDMAN
Director Hospital Electric Cookery Institute

"And for a tempting, delightfully easy-to-prepare menu we suggest this simple little seven course meal for you and your family. . . . Barbara, the rather new bride, slammed the book shut. What a help that was when she couldn't even roast meat, much less think about making pimiento bisque and petite fours!

beans and carrot slivers, and spiced baked apples, may be cooked at one time in the miracle oven without any watching, without any worry, without you even being at home! You take thirty minutes to prepare it, and the miracle oven does the rest.

Thirty-Minute Meal
The meat is seasoned and placed in an open roasting pan. Then the

Thirty-minute oven meals, such as this, are the gift of the modern electric range other brides, or, perhaps, from many more experienced homemakers. Seven course menus made up of complicated, experience-demanding recipes aren't one bit of help when we're trying to solve this everlasting, everyday meal problem.

Helps Bewildered Housewife

But a miracle has happened. The new automatic electric range, called the "miracle" range for short, has come forth to help the bewildered housewife solve, easily and triumphantly, this everyday meal problem. In homes where a miracle electric range has been installed, cooking has now become a scientific and accurate art.

What would you say if you were told that you could prepare a delicious oven dinner, dessert in everything, in thirty minutes or less? A dinner consisting of roast loin of pork, baked potatoes, buttered green beans and carrots and a small quantity of water are placed in a covered vegetable pan. Next, the skins of the potatoes are rubbed lightly with fat, and the apples are pared and "fixed up" in the usual manner. Then they all go into the unpreheated, well-insulated electric oven. The accurate temperature control is set at the correct baking temperature and the oven switch is turned to Bake. Should you want to postpone the cooking for a few hours (you may be going out, not to return until a few minutes before dinner time), simply set the automatic timer clock at the time when you wish the baking to start and to end.

So, such a dinner can be prepared in thirty minutes or less, can it not? Nor will it take much longer than thirty minutes, perhaps, for this appetizing, temptingly-cooked miracle dinner to disappear like magic, too!

ART WILL DEPICT NATION'S HISTORY IN U. S. MUSEUM

WASHINGTON—(UP)—Paintings, miniature sculptures and maps, depicting outstanding events connected with the activities of the interior department are being prepared for the museum of the new interior department building to be completed next December.

Recently, Secretary Harold L. Ickes announced that artists, sculptors and cartographers were at work in a field laboratory at Morristown, N. J., assembling material.

All branches and divisions of the interior department are co-operating with the national parks service in developing the museum. Because of the widespread activities of these bureaus, their portrayal necessarily will tell in a large measure the history and growth of the country. The story of the early pioneers in their struggle with the Indians and the forces of nature, the gradual development of the country in mining, geology and human relations will be graphically depicted. Some of the bureaus to be portrayed are the Indian bureau, reclamation, national parks service, geological survey, bureau of mines and the grazing division.

The paintings, illustrating the hardships of the men and women who blazed the trail across the continent, will be hung above the cases containing the sculptured exhibits. Among these illustrations, painted by Wilfred Branson, are "The Covered Wagon" and other scenes depicting the lives of the pioneers and their struggle for existence.

The miniature sculptures, made from plaster of Paris and skillfully painted for realistic effect, are being prepared by Rosario Fiori, Basil E. Martin, Albert McClure, Donald M. Johnson and Lyman Royal.

The illuminated relief, and flat maps, charts and drawings, illustrating the progress of man, are being prepared by Arthur Ohlman, Otto John, Joseph Andrew and Harry Wood.

All characters were good, but Gordon Hatch, as the man from Brandon, was especially good and Ceina Smith, as the maid, caused much amusement. This was one of the contest plays and won fourth place.

Parties seemed in order at school last week. The pupils of Miss Frances Schilling's room gave her a surprise in the school dining room. Wednesday afternoon and on Friday the first and second grades surprised their teacher, Mrs. Schelly, with a party in the dining room.

GRADING OF HONEY NOW COMPULSORY

PORTLAND, Feb. 7.—(UP)—Honey grading now is compulsory in Oregon and there will be active enforcement starting April 1, the state department of agriculture announced today.

"Standard containers for extracted honey shall be 5, 8, 16 and 48 ounce glass or fiber containers, and 2½, 5, 10 and 60-pound avoirdupois capacity tin containers," the announcement stated. "Containers must be strong, clean and new in appearance. The indicated weights refer to net weight of honey and not to water capacity."

The department gave packers since July 1 of last year to dispose of non-standard containers.

"The official standards for extracted honey are No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3. Grade A labels may be used in honey of the quality of No. 1, providing the producer or packer has applied for and has been granted a grade A honey license. No charge is made for the inspection of packing plants nor for the grade A license, but a small charge is made for grade A labels."
