

REDFERN CAPTIVE OF GUIANA TRIBE IS LATEST CLAIM

Harred as saying Redfern was held captive in the jungle fastnesses of Guiana by an Indian tribe.

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Alfred Harred, newspaperman of Paramaribo, declared today he and Art Williams, American pilot, had found the long-missing Paul Redfern alive in the Tumuc Humac mountains in western Guiana.

The fliers said they were forced to leave Redfern in the hands of an Indian tribe which will not permit him to escape.

Harred said Redfern was crippled as the result of the crash which on August 26, 1927, ended his attempt to make a solo flight from Bunnswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro.

Harred and Williams returned to civilization after a flight into the back country in an effort to locate the American. Their story tends to corroborate one told months ago by Tom Koch, German-American explorer.

Redfern, all three said, is a captive of a wild Indian tribe which holds him in awe because he came out of the skies and which will not let him escape.

Harred said that after he and Williams flew into the interior, they saw remains of Redfern's plane hanging on the branches of a large tree.

Later, they found the missing American, dressed in ragged under-shirt and drawers.

As they chatted with him, they said, 500 Indians with poisoned spears and other weapons surrounded them.

"When the Indians saw we intended to take Redfern away," said Harred, "they threatened us with spears."

"On Redfern's advice we left, waiting four days in the district in the hope of effecting a rescue, but eventually we had to return without him."

Harred said Redfern's arms and legs were broken in the crash of his plane, but that the medicine men had set the bones. He said Redfern walked with crutches.

Williams has been flying a five-seat flying boat, carrying supplies the last few months to the Dutch Guiana boundary commission.

He has been using the numerous rivers running through the back country area where the commission is working, as landing ports. He has been financed by Edward Sill, Georgetown merchant.

COUNTY WILL CURTAIL ROAD WORK THIS YEAR IS WORD FROM COURT

New road work will be limited in Jackson county the coming year as the county court has cancelled all plans for new work with exception of the McAndrews bridge over Bear creek and the Valley View road near Ashland. These jobs receive some WPA funds.

County Judge Earl B. Day said today, road maintenance and bridge repairs and improvements would be the main projects. The budget provides $25,000 for bridge construction. There are more than 600 bridges of all sizes and varieties in the county.

"For several years no work was done on bridges," said County Judge Day. "They only last so long, and disintegration is catching up with our economy. It is the part of good sound business to place them in order. A couple of damage suits in case anything should happen, would cost more than $25,000."

The five year ciling program launched two years ago will be continued, and it is expected that about ten miles of road, in all sections of the county will be oiled this year under the co-operative plan whereby residents along a road and the county, each pay half the oiling cost, the county furnishing the equipment.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 20.—(AP)—The former Annie Gould Meador, 22, great granddaughter of the late Jay Gould, and Herman H. Elsbury, 24, Cody, Wyo., cowboy and dude wrangler, today were believed on their way to New York city after their marriage here Saturday.

Elsbury, in a "super-gallon" sombrero, whipcord riding breeches and cowboy boots, the girl in gray traveling suit, were wed by a congregational minister whose wife and daughter were the only witnesses.

Mrs. Lillian Livingston, sister of the bridegroom living on a ranch 20 miles from Cody, said she had received no word from her brother since the wedding, but "thought they were on their way to New York" in her brother's new automobile.

She said her brother and his bride first met when she was a guest on the Sunlight dude ranch in the summer of 1933. Mrs. Livingston said the girl visited the ranch again last summer.

New Brooder Uses Any Kind of Wood

Of interest to all turkey and chicken raisers in this vicinity is the announcement that the Valley Fuel Co. will handle the new Shenandoah wood burning brooder stove. This brooder is designed to burn any kind of wood and one filling will last 24 hours, or more, according to Olan Robinson.

It is thermostatically controlled and in tests it has maintained just the right temperature at all times. Mr. Robinson says: "The big feature of this brooder is the saving the average poultry raiser can make by using wood from or near his own ranch, instead of buying oil, coal, briquets or electricity in town."
