

FAIR TO OBSERVE HISTORY OF TEXAS UNDER SIX FLAGS

Lone Star State's Past to Be Reviewed at Centennial Exposition From June 6 to November 29

DALLAS, (UP) — Texas, in celebrating its 100th anniversary with the Texas centennial exposition June 6 through November 29, will observe a unique historical record—the only state in the Union ever to attain recognition of a republic, boasting more flags than any other state, and having had more capitals.

The colorful background, engendered by the change of capital cities, national flags and varying political fortunes, make a glamorous pattern for the centennial celebration.

Six flags, which flew over Texas in the years that saw the state's development from a wilderness to a great commonwealth, will fly over the exposition grounds.

Hall of State Built
In a Texas Hall of State, now being constructed on the exposition grounds at a cost of $1,500,000, will be housed relics of those old days when Texans could never be quite sure where the capital would be when they awoke in the morning.

In the past 250 years, six flags, France, Spain, Mexico, Republic of Texas, United States, and the Confederacy, have flown over Texas, and the capital has been moved 15 times, although four cities have appeared in the capital list twice.

Repossessed by Spain
The Spanish banner was raised in Texas before that of the French and later, when Rene Robert Cavalier, Sieur de la Salle, and his followers deserted the short-lived French colony on Matagorda Bay, Spain repossessed Texas.

The flag of the United States first flew over Texas when the state joined the union, ceasing to be a republic. Then, Texas became one of the Confederate states, later rejoining the union.

Texas, alone in the union, became a member of the United States after being established as an independent republic, whose sovereignty was recognized by Great Britain, the United States, France and other powers.

Contrasted With California
Although California set up a republic before the Mexican war, it never attained foreign governmental recognition, nor did it function as an individual political entity, and its "republic" lasted but a few weeks.

Vermont, before the Boston tea party and the revolution, declared itself a republic and refused to pay taxes to New York, then head of the British colonial government. However, the formation of the Continental Congress, the Declaration of Independence and other major events of the period obscured the Vermont republic claim, and it became one of the 13 states.

Should the founders of the "Lone Star" state be able to revisit their old haunts today, they would find them revered shrines to the fires of patriotism and independence that brought forth Texas.

Visitors to the centennial will see some of the largest mural decorations ever painted in the United States.

Epagne Savage, New York artist, has been commissioned to execute the murals, which will decorate the $1,000,000 Hall of State building. The paintings will cover 6,000 square feet of wall space, and the two largest will measure 31 by 80 feet each.

Murals to Trace History
The murals will depict the history of Texas from the coming of the first white man to the present, showing development of the region under the six flags.

Bronze statues of six outstanding heroes of colonial days and the Texas republic also will be cast for use in the Hall of State building. The statues, each of which will stand about 8 feet tall, will be made of Pompeo Coppini, sculptor, who divides his time between New York and San Antonio.

The six heroes chosen as most worthy of honor positions at the centennial are Stephen F. Austin, "Father of Texas"; Sam Houston, who served as governor of Tennessee and United States senator from that state; then came to Texas to direct its revolutionary armies and stayed to be president of the republic, governor of the state of Texas, and United States senator from his adopted home; William B. Travis, commander of the troops who lost their lives defending the Alamo; Mirabeau Lamar, a president of the republic; and Generals Thomas J. Rusk and James W. Fannin.

PROMOTER HELD ON STOCK DEAL

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 26.—(AP)—John A. Charlesworth, 47, Portland and Seattle promoter and builder, was ordered detained here today at request of Seattle authorities. They said he was to be questioned in connection with a stock or bond deal.

Charlesworth, then chairman of the board of the "Pacific National Syndicate," was accused here in 1932 of selling accumulative certificates of the syndicate without a permit from the state corporation commission. He was convicted and sentenced to prison, but the courts a few months later reversed the conviction. The state supreme court refused to entertain a motion for rehearing.

When Charlesworth was arrested today by federal agents and Patrolmen Hall and Cameron, a suit for $70,000 against him and a number of stockholders at his insolvent Pacific National Syndicate was being heard in circuit court.

WAS MY FACE RED

The coffee was so swell at dinner last night compared with what we'd been having for months that I asked my wife "How come?" When she told me it was Hills Bros. I got all set for another spiel about the family budget.

But I piped down plenty quick when she told me it cost practically the same as most of the other coffees we'd been trying. Well, my face was red all right, but my palate was tickled pink.

Can you beat it? Almost the same cost, but miles ahead in taste!
