

STATE WILL EYE ALCOHOL MAKING AS NEW INDUSTRY

Board of Control Authorizes Investigation — Plant in Medford Seen As Possibility to Use Refuse

SALEM, March 2.—(AP)—The board of control today authorized a thorough investigation of proposed establishment of an industrial alcohol plant at the state penitentiary as the first step toward creating a new industry in the state in a four-way program as an aid further to assist many industries.

The action was taken when John H. Lewis, former state engineer, appeared before the board with a plan for a demonstration plant at the state penitentiary to utilize waste products for manufacture of alcohol which can be used to blend with gasoline for state use. Lewis appeared at the invitation of Rufus C. Holman, state treasurer, in a movement to find employment for convicts as soon as the flat industry is eliminated at the prison.

Benefits Pictured

Lewis, in presenting his picture, declared the program would provide work for convicts, salvage of fruit and vegetable waste, stream pollution and manufacture industrial alcohol. Using the penitentiary plant as a demonstration, he pictured further a $3,000,000 investment in different cities of the state where such private plants could be located.

Proposed locations for these plants, he said, would be at Klamath Falls, Medford, Roseburg, Eugene, Salem, Baker, Pendleton, Coos Bay, Hillsboro and Bend. These locations, he declared, could supply the amount of waste necessary.

Lewis declared the legislature would have to provide the funds for the demonstration plant, which he estimated would cost $185,000. The survey ordered would be prepared for presentation to the legislature. Alcohol could be manufactured for about 10 cents a gallon, and the output would be 2500 gallons per day by utilization of 100 tons of waste from canneries.

Used in Europe

The industry, when developed, would be the first in this country although 30 foreign countries are now doing it, Lewis declared. It would prove a distinct benefit, not only in keeping convicts at work, but would aid the farmers, the fishermen, the canneries, and the people as a whole who are now paying high prices for gasoline.

The alcohol would make third structure gasoline better than the highest grade at the present time, Lewis continued. Virtually every type of waste could be utilized, and alcohol can be made out of virtually every commodity, including sawdust.

Holman moved for authorization of a thorough study which was approved by Governor Martin. The executive warned, however, that the one trouble with the penitentiary proposal is the potential waste of funds due to political management.

SECOND HOTTEST MARCH 1 SENDS PUBLIC TO OPEN

Yesterday was the hottest day since last October 18, the second hottest March 1 on record here and one of the only three days that the mercury has climbed to 70 degrees or higher on March 1 since weather records have been kept in Medford beginning in 1912.

The maximum temperature yesterday was 72 degrees, the highest March 1 mark since 1926 when the mercury reached an all-time peak of 73. On March 1, 1931, the temperature attained a maximum of 70. Yesterday's mark was the highest of the year since last October 18 when the mercury reached a top of 74.

The lowest temperature today was 37, the same as yesterday's minimum.

There was a chance today's maximum would exceed that of yesterday. The mercury was slow in rising but it shot up seven degrees between 11:30 and 12:30 and by early afternoon stood at 62 degrees as against 60 at the same hour yesterday.

Yesterday's summer weather took most residents to the out-of-doors, tear horticulturalists, both men and women, could be seen grooming flower beds, planting shrubs or tilling gardens.

Many went to Crater Lake national park for a day of skiing, though most of the crowd there came from Klamath Falls and vicinity. Harold Wall, who skied in the park with Fred Schmidt and Ardo Stocks, predicted Wednesday two snow slides on Mount Garfield. One was about 80 feet wide, the other 60. Wall said. They were about 60 feet apart and the second slide occurred about 15 minutes after the first, he related.

Another large crowd waited the airport during the day. Those who witnessed arrival of the United mail-passenger ship at 3 o'clock also saw the arrival of an army bomber which came in just as the transport was leaving.

The bomber was in command of Cadet Richard T. Knight, who was accompanied by three other army men. After refueling the ship continued on its flight from Portland to Hamilton field, Cal.

Later in the afternoon a plane of the Washington Aircraft and Transport company arrived from San Francisco in command of Bob C. Hayes. It departed this morning for Seattle.

WHERE DOCTOR PERFORMED MID-AIR OPERATION

This picture shows where Dr. N. Gillmor Long (inset) performed a spectacular mid-air operation at Lowell, Mass., to amputate the arm of John McCoy, crane operator, with a hacksaw. The physician had to climb 50 feet in the air and perch himself atop the ladder at the left to get at McCoy, who had been pinned to the steel girder indicated by the arrow when the crane's cab broke loose. McCoy, who remained conscious through the ordeal, was in a serious condition. (Associated Press Photos)
