

KARASICK HANDS MEANIE GRAPPLER TERRIBLE LACING

A very considerable portion of his skin and practically all of the meanness was removed from Ken Hollis, Oaf of the Ozarks, in his main appearance against Al Karasick at the Army last night, when the veteran Russian grappler called forth all of his guile, strength and viciousness to completely annihilate the tough one from Arkansas. Karasick took the first fall with his famous Boston crab in 11 minutes after the two had exchanged head scissors and Hollis had punched the Karasick mitts several times.

Karasick, feigning grogginess, caught Hollis with several elbow lifts as the meanie moved in too fast, and flopped him over into the crab with almost ridiculous ease. Hollis took the middle tumble with a flying slingshot over the top rope after cutting Karasick to the floor from outside the ring as the two stood toe to toe and slugged. After his long jaunt through the ozone, Hollis pinned the Cosack with a body press.

In the last wild round, Hollis displayed the only real wrestling he has ever shown in Medford, and after finding some success in this novel procedure, so far forgot his sense of proportion as to gouge Karasick's eyes. Other meannies have gouged those eyes to their own discomfiture, and last night's attempt by Hollis proved no exception.

Staggering about as though half blinded, the Russian again caught Hollis off guard and floored him with a terrific uppercut, and then heaved him out of the ring. Hollis again essayed his leap over the top rope, but Karasick scuttled away like a land crab, and the Oaf landed on his own chops. It was all Karasick from that point forward, the Russian swarming over his enemy with flaming arms, twice more tossing Hollis out of the ring. The last impromptu trip into the audience finished Hollis, as hanging balanced on the top strand of hemp Karasick brought down both hands on his head and sent him cartwheeling into the front row.

Dude Chick, after playing with Stanley Rogers in the middle main event for two 10-minute rounds, finally got up off the floor in the third while Rogers had an arm bar on him, and spun the Texan in his lariet spin. With Rogers as the vortex of Chick's last-round trip, the match was over, as Rogers tried vainly to collect his edgy thoughts in the five minutes time. He was unable to return, although he recovered his equilibrium faster than has any other man who has made the trip in the Army arena.

That eminent Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Illinois, Barney Cosneck, gave a singularly apt demonstration of the following philosophical syllogism:

Cosneck thrashes all meannies (major premise)
Mike Caddock is a meanie (minor premise)
Therefore Cosneck thrashes Caddock (conclusion)

Cosneck took the first fall when he became angry at Caddock's persistent use of flats and hair pulling, and fed the obnoxious ex-goh a thousand elbows and then clamped him in a peculiar rolling head scissors combined with an arm bar, ending the demonstration with a body press.

In the next round, after Caddock had beat Cosneck groggy with rabbit punches and straight blows to the chin and was then arguing with referee Priole about the ethics of the game, Cosneck got off the floor and went to work in earnest.

The Ph.D. slammed Caddock to the floor violently, and as he got off the mat sobberly he hit twice and again applied his rolling head scissors, finishing the performance in short order with another body press. The crowd in attendance was one of the largest of the year.

GIRL STAR IS PROBLEM ON SCHOOL BALL TEAM

WEBSTER, Mass., March 17.—(AP)—The questioned advisability of allowing a 17-year old girl to remain a member of a high school boys' baseball team on which she happens to be the star first baseman gave Webster educational authorities a problem today.

Nelle Twardzik, who won her place last year over 25 boys who failed to make the squad, believes she should keep the post. But Coach George Pinnigan and the members of the school's athletic council, are now of the opinion that boys' team is no place for her.

Nelle's view is that "It's silly to make all this fuss just because I'm a girl. I never was any bother when I played last year."

The school's athletic council called a meeting for Thursday to decide the fate of its ace box office attraction.

Principal Cyril C. Smith, to whom scores of protests have been made by fans, remained non-committal. Last year, when Nelle won her place on the team the school's baseball season drew ten times as many spectators as in preceding years.

Nelle's teammates want her to stay, even Tony Stanoci, who would be the regular first baseman if Nelle were banned.

CARNERA STOPPED IN THREE ROUNDS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 17.—(AP)—The comeback bubble that Primo Carnera was inflating toward title-challenging size is shattered.

Laruping LeRoy Haynes, a brawny battler from the Pacific coast, with explosives in either hand—and particularly the right—blocked the former heavyweight champion's effort in three battering rounds last night before 10,000 fans.

He joined Primo with two crashing right hooks in the first frame, tumbled him to the canvas twice in the second, and then finished him in the third when the ponderous one, unable to take any more of the beating he was getting, turned his back and quit in his own corner.

Haynes' triumph was more convincing in that, although he weighed 197½ to Carnera's 268, he stopped the Italian in half the number of rounds it took Joe Louis, and in slightly more than a quarter of the time it took Max Baer.

AS this is written, which is late Friday, the latest Lloyd's quotation (the famous Lloyd's of London, who are supposed to be willing to take a gambling chance on anything) on prospects of war in Europe stands as follows:

A European war in six months, nine and a half to one AGAINST.
French troops entering the Rhineland zone within three months, 48 1/2 to one against.

THOSE who back their judgment with money, you see, are not greatly excited over the prospect of an IMMEDIATE war.

THIS dispatch from London is interesting: "United States ABSENCE from the league of nations today gravely worried French financial experts wrestling with the problem of applying proposed sanctions against Germany."

WHEN the league of nations, prodded by Britain, was talking of applying sanctions against Mussolini because of his venture in Ethiopia, France couldn't work up even a good semblance of interest; because France didn't really care a hoot whether Mussolini stayed in Ethiopia or got out.

But now Hitler is on a rampage in the Rhineland, along FRANCE'S boundaries, and France is yelling for sanctions at the top of her voice.

Over in Europe, it certainly makes a difference whose shoe is pinching. (Sanctions, as of course you know if you've been reading the papers, is a diplomat's pretty word for boycott.)

WHY is France worried about the absence of the United States from the league of nations in connection with this sanctions business?

Well, there are two reasons. One is that if everybody else boycotts Germany and the United States DOESN'T, Germany won't be bothered much because she could buy about everything she needs from the United States.

The other is that with the United States OUT of the league of nations France can't think of an immediately promising scheme to make us pay for a war if she started one.

EVEN as it is, war or no war, the situation isn't so good from the European, and especially the French, viewpoint, as may be seen from these figures:

Germany now BUYS annually from the United States about 30 million dollars more than she sells, whereas she SELLS to Great Britain nearly 140 million dollars annually more than she buys, and in the case of France her sales are nearly 200 million dollars a year more than her purchases.
