IT'S funny how childhood memories become more vivid as the years roll by. Many little things we had completely forgotten suddenly come to mind and become priceless possessions in our storehouse of cherished memories. A few days ago we got to talking about Mother's Cookie Jar—you know—we can't help but pity the kid who has never known the delights of the home cookie jar.—True, he doesn't know what he has missed but that makes no difference. Take it from one who knows—coming from school and getting a cookie from the jar is not like getting it out of a cardboard box. The personal touch of Mother is not in the box. The memory of Mother's cookie jar is perhaps the most cherished in our panorama of childhood experience. In later years it will be the same to the kids of today. Let's revive this old-fashioned home institution.

Super Meat Markets Saturday Night LUNCH HAMBURGER

Did you ever know a man who didn't enjoy a good Hamburger Sandwich. Even though some may be a little skeptical about hamburger and deny themselves they admit a fondness for it when sure it's good.

Personally we believe this skepticism to be a fallacy. No successful butcher could be other than conscientious in his desire to win your favor and stay in business.

Our Hamburger is ground from clean wholesome meat from the same steers that supply the fancy steaks and roasts you see in our cases.

For our own home use we buy our regular hamburger and like very much but if you prefer to see it ground you may select a round steak and the boys will grind it for you.—That, however costs more so we take the regular hamburger for our own use.
