Mr. Tedrow, who has been promoted to the Colville national forest, plans to leave here with Mrs. Tedrow on Wednesday for Tonasket, Wash., where the couple will make their home.

BLOOMING TREES HIT SEVERE BLOW BY UNUSUAL COLD

Medford federal experiment station, and Dr. F. C. Reimer of the Talent experiment station. Both agreed that "it always looks worse than it really is."

Hard to Heat "Undoubtedly, in orchards that did not amidge, there will be heavy damage," Dr. Reimer said. "Due to atmospheric conditions it was difficult to heat, as the heat sped upwards quickly. The late blooming pears and other fruits have probably escaped severe loss, as they are in a less advanced state of development than the earlier pears. There will be plenty of pears left, in my opinion."

"It was a severe frost and there will be some loss, and some of the pears may be marked," said Dr. Aldrich. "The extent cannot be determined until after the blossoms have turned black or brown. The latter condition will develop today."

Dr. Reimer said the pears have survived just as cold a period. Records show that on April 2, 1918, the mercury dropped to 21 degrees at the Talent station—a degree less than that shown last night.

Heavy Loss Feared County Horticulturist G. D. Cordy also stated the loss could not be determined until later, but said, "there was undoubtedly heavy loss in some of the colder orchards." Damage in the general run of orchards, where smudging prevailed, he figured as nominal loss, with varying degrees according to conditions.

"A wind blew most of the night, which made it difficult to keep the temperatures up, and it was heavy cold," Horticulturist Cordy said. "In some of the colder orchards, smudging started as early as eight o'clock, and smudging crews were hastily called from their homes and the area. After a cloudy day, the sky cleared shortly after seven o'clock. In some orchards the firing continued until past eight o'clock this morning. A light haze in mid-day this morning minimized the danger. A heavy blanket of smoke blanketed the orchard districts most of the day."

HITLER DEFENDS HIS POLICY

The German leader, surrounded by Nazi emblems and loyal followers, is shown as he told an estimated crowd of 100,000 at Karlsruhe, Baden, that nothing could make Germany renounce her regained sovereignty over the Rhineland. GERMAN ELECTION ARMS HITLER FOR NEW AGGRESSIONS

In the German view, the fact that there was no chance to vote in opposition, but only to take the Nazi party list or leave it, did not detract from the overwhelming Nazi triumph.

Der Fuehrer now felt, informants said, that whatever he might demand from the other powers as would demand not as the dictator, but as the servant of 67,000,000 Germans who commanded him not to yield one inch of German territory, nor one bit of German rights.

Hitler, it was believed, would be more intransigent than ever now in his dealings with other nations. There was no intimation, however, of the exact contents of his extensive counter-proposals to the Locarno powers, promised for tomorrow in his preliminary reply March 24 to the London plan for a settlement of the Rhineland issue.

ity that Governor Harold G. Hoffman might exercise a self admitted doubtful power of reprieve.

The governor virtually passed Hauptmann's case before the pardons court.

He has said repeatedly however that he had no intention of granting another reprieve.

The corridor of the state house where the announcement was made, was jammed with persons including legislators returning for the session tonight.

TRENTON, N. J., March 30. — (AP) The long shadow of the Lindbergh baby murder fell across two more men today even as the court of pardons met to consider the mercy plea of the condemned third—Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

One of the new figures in the increasingly bewildering case — the middle-aged, clergyman's son, Paul H. Wendel, — was held in jail here. A formal charge of having murdered the baby was filed against him, but he issued a statement denying any knowledge of the crime, and the county prosecutor said he, too, was convinced there was nothing to warrant prosecution.

The other man—Gaston B. Means, former federal agent and now a federal prisoner for having fleeced Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean by pretending to be an intermediary in ransom negotiations with the Lindbergh baby kidnapers—stood self-accused by a "confession" purportedly penned in his Leavenworth penitentiary cell.

The focus of interest, however, burned with increasing brightness upon the principal figure, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, despite the introduction of the new characters into the case. The question to be answered either by the court of pardons or by Governor Harold G. Hoffman was whether Hauptmann would die as scheduled at 8 o'clock tomorrow night.

red Astaire and Ginger Rogers in Craterian Romance

New box office records were set at the Craterian theatre yesterday with the opening of the new Astaire-Rogers hit "Follow the Fleet."

greeting the capacity crowds that thronged the theatre, the stars appeared, whirled, exchanged wisecracks, sang and romanced in the style that has made Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers the ace dance team of the screen. They can mark down "Follow the Fleet" as one of their best.

But, in the enthusiasm over the talents that are so marked in the two stars, one shouldn't forget Randolph Scott—playing the part of Fred's sailor-buddy, nor should one fail to mention Harriet Hilliard, who makes her screen debut in this show, giving every promise of becoming a big time favorite. For one thing she has a charming manner, for another, an attractive face and figure, and topping those attributes, a pleasing voice that is heard in her introduction of two of the many Irving Berlin songs.

numbers. "Get Thee Behind Me Satan" and "Where Are You?" But, getting back to Astaire and the lovely to look upon Miss Rogers. Starting off with a bang, the film opens with Fred leading his sailor band in a catchy novelty number "We Saw the Sea." From there the scene rapidly shifts to a dance hall in San Francisco, where Ginger is one of the paid entertainers. All of which gives the two their first chance to get together and dance in a snappy routine "Let Yourself Go," that has as much snap and verve and whirling feet as you'll see in many a day. Later on in the film, Ginger uses it for a solo number in an audition for a job—which, incidentally, she does not get due to Fred's well-meaning but ruinous interference.

As Astaire also has a solo number in "I'd Rather Lead a Band," set on the deck of the battleship, and topping his routine in "Top Hat," which is going some to say the least. There are a couple of other numbers in which the two stars join. "All My Eggs in One Basket," a semi-comedy novelty bit and, as the grand finale, their latest ballroom creation "Let's Face the Music and Dance."

There is plenty of the "snap and go" that has characterized past hits from these two stars, which when mixed with the comedy and background story makes "Follow the Fleet" one of those pictures that should be marked down as the "must see" type. It plays until tomorrow night only.

Famous Mentalist On Rialto's Stage Starting Sunday

Something new greeted patrons at the Rialto theatre yesterday with the opening of Jay Clarke's week engagement on the stage where the famous mentalist is causing the audience to wonder "How does he do it?" For, apparently not a mis yesterday marred his record of not only repeating questions that were written on pieces of paper—without even taking them out of the glass jar in which they had been dropped—but also giving the answers, leaving the questioner wondering at the almost uncanny powers of the man.

The screen feature on the program gives George Raft one of the best parts he has ever had. Teamed with Rosalind Russell and Leo Carrillo, "It Had to Happen" is the swiftly-paced, thoroughly entertaining story of an Italian immigrant who rises rapidly to political power from his lowly start as a ditch-digger. Rosalind Russell is Mrs. Rodman Drake, wife of one of New York's big trust company's presidents, a part played by Alan Dinehart. Leo Carrillo is Raft's bosom friend and it is Carrillo who, in his own particular and altogether comical style, brings in much of the comedy with which the film abounds.

For those who like Raft as the hard-hitting tough guy, the picture gives one exceptional scene in which the Latin star starts a veritable roughhouse after getting fed up with being pushed about by his fellow workers. For those who like to see the suave and romantic George Raft, they also can have their desires fulfilled for it is in his scenes with Miss Russell that Raft gives his best performances. And after all, who wouldn't want to be Russell, who is rapidly becoming one of the screen's best-liked feminine stars?
