Fine Cast in Craterian's Drama

Departing from the accepted standard of "triangle plays," "These Three," which opens its Pacific coast premiere at the Craterian theater Sunday, has Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea and 12-year-old Bonita Granville in a dramatic and powerful story of the evil that can be caused by a spiteful child's malicious lying. The story shows Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon, heads of a small girls' school established with the help of a young doctor, Joel McCrea, whom they both love. The whole school is harassed by the presence of Bonita Granville, a vicious child, given to glib lying and bullying of the other children. To evade punishment for a misdemeanor, she runs away from school, inventing a malicious lie involving these three innocent adults, as her reason. An ugly scandal develops, as a result of which the school is lost, the romance that had developed between McCrea and Miss Oberon is broken, and the lives of all three seem irreparably ruined until Miss Hopkins succeeds in bringing the truth to light and the story to a happy ending. Forebodingly told and advance reports crediting the three stars with brilliant performances, "These Three" is expected to become one of the year's outstanding photoplays—certainly one of the most discussed.

Ann Harding in Sunday Film

"The Lady Consents," Ann Harding's latest vehicle, is starting a three-day run at the Rialto theater Sunday. Herbert Marshall, a favorite with American audiences, divides star honors with the blonde actress. The story, sophisticated comedy punctuated with moments of tense drama, is said to give a new twist to the society domestic triangle. Margaret Lindsay and Walter Abel are also featured. The world's foremost mentalist, Jay Clarke, ends a sensational week's engagement at the Rialto Saturday night. Mr. Clarke has been more than flooded with questions during his personal appearances with both matinee and evening performances. "Moonlight on the Prairie" with Dick Foran, screen's new singing star, plays today and tomorrow with Jay Clarke's last stage appearances.

At Craterian

Donald Duck, beware. Behind that angelic smile is a heart filled with beguilement, and within that lovely flower is an angry hornet. It's all part of the fun Mickey Mouse's orphan friends have at Donald's expense in the new Disney cartoon, "Orphan's Picnic," playing at the Craterian theater on the same program with Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy in "Biffruff," opening a three-day run today.

SHRINERS HEAR EXPERT ON OIL

Members of the Medford Shrine club were entertained at their monthly luncheon meeting today by W. S. Thurlow, lubricating engineer for the Standard Oil company. The Standard official told the Shriners, who were gathered at the Hotel Medford, many interesting facts concerning his company and the many products now marketed throughout the world by the Standard Oil company. Gasoline, motor oils, and greases were stressed in Mr. Thurlow's talk and the methods of manufacture from crude oil, and their general and commercial uses were outlined. The speaker is a lubrication specialist attached to the staff of the Medford district, operating from this city in southern Oregon, northern California and a portion of Nevada.

Jackson county chapter of the American Red Cross today slightly exceeded its quota of $675 for eastern flood relief. It was announced by George T. Frey, local chairman. The response to the Red Cross plea was wholly spontaneous and voluntary, there having been no semblance of a formal campaign. Mr. Frey expressed his appreciation of the public's generosity and declared that depository offices would continue to receive voluntary contributions so that the county's fund may be made as large as possible.
