

WPA WORKERS INVADE WISCONSIN CAPITOL

FOUR COUPLES OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Not just one, but four couples participated in a Golden Wedding celebration at Caldwell, Ida. When the Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Bird observed their anniversary, they were joined by three other couples who had passed the 50-year mark of married life. Left to right (above and below): the J. N. Meadors, the Will McKinzie, the Birds and the Sam Vassara. (Associated Press Photo)

WEDS EX-HUSBAND'S TEAM-MATE

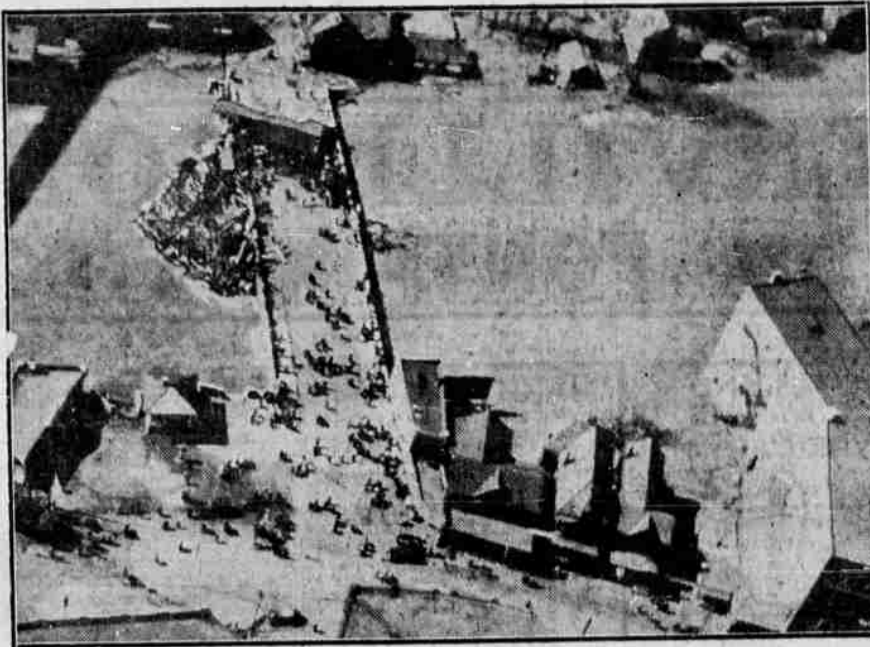

The former Mrs. Zanita Muller, who divorced Dr. Harold P. "Brick" Muller at Reno, and Gerald G. Pearce are pictured after their marriage at San Francisco. Muller and Pearce played together on the University of California "wonder teams" of 1922 and 1923. (Associated Press Photo)

RESCUED FROM PORCH TOP

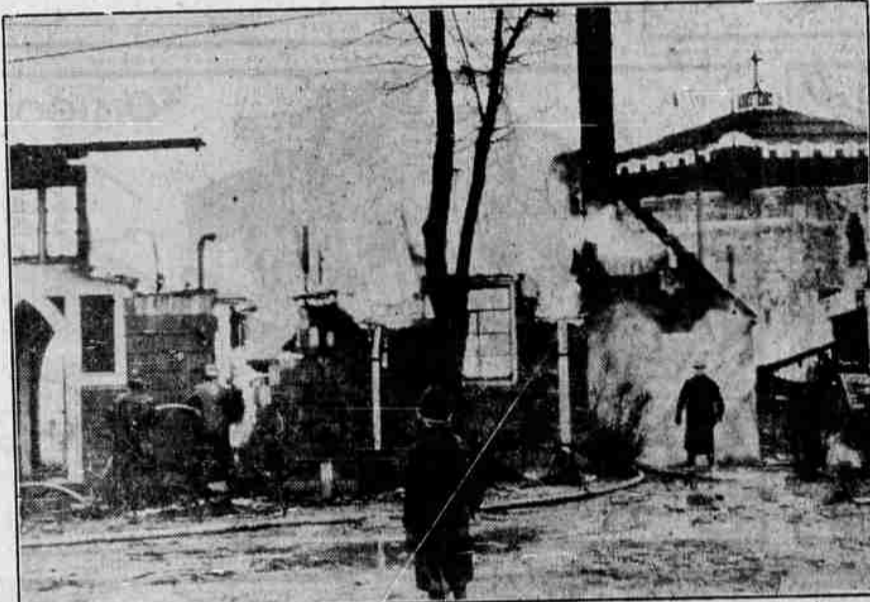

These folks stuck to their flood-besieged home at Hancock, Md., as long as they could but they finally had to leave. William Perkins and Miss Clara Henderson are shown boarding the boat as Homer Tabler waited to row them to higher ground. (Associated Press Photo)

JOHNSTOWN AGAIN DEVASTATED BY SURGING FLOOD

Johnstown, Pa., scene of the great disaster of 1889 when a dam burst and 2,235 persons were killed, was again devastated by terrific flood waters from the Conemaugh river which covered the streets 16 feet deep for a while and isolated the city. National guardmen and rescue parties were sent to the city to help relieve the stricken residents. This aerial photograph shows citizens on a bridge in the heart of Johnstown watching a house which crashed against the bridge. (Associated Press Photo)

FIRE RAZES ORIGINAL COUGHLIN SHRINE

The blaze which destroyed the original wooden structure of the Shrine of the Little Flower, Father Charles E. Coughlin's church at Royal Oak, Mich., is shown here at its height. The dome of the new shrine, which was not touched, is visible in the background. Father Coughlin estimated the loss at $30,000. (Associated Press Photo)

IS FLIER ALIVE IN JUNGLE?

The nine-year mystery of the disappearance of Paul Redfern, American flier, while on an attempted solo flight to Rio de Janeiro again became a cause of speculation when he was reported alive as a prisoner of a tribe of natives in western Guiana in South America. But the report was denied. Redfern and his wife are shown in one of their last pictures together before his takeoff from Brunswick, Ga., in 1927. (Associated Press Photo)

PRINCIPALS IN FLOGGING CASE

Three men were put on trial at Tampa, Fla., on charges of kidnaping E. F. Poulnot (left), who was seized and flogged there last year, along with Joseph Shoemaker, labor organizer who was fatally beaten. S. D. Rogers (right), the third man flogged, was a key witness for the prosecution. (Associated Press Photos)

ALASKA DOG DERBY WINNER

OUT TO SPEAR A WINTER MEAL

Long before the white man came, Indians gathered like these at Cello falls near The Dalles to take the choicest of salmon that means food when winter comes. Travelers along the Columbia River Highway never tire of watching Indians deftly spearing and netting fish when the runs are going up the river. In letters to the Travel and Information department of the Oregon State Highway Commission many 1935 tourists took occasion to say how much the Indians at Cello had intrigued them.

FLOWERS WELCOME CAVALRY

Young girls of the Rhineland city of Duesseldorf are shown greeting the German cavalry with gifts of flowers as the Nazi troops marched into that section of the demilitarized zone after Hitler's denunciation of the Locarno Pact. This picture was telephotographed from Berlin to London and sent across the Atlantic by radio. (Associated Press Photo)

PROUD OF DADDY'S MEDAL

Barrow Morgan, 4-year-old Alaska-born son of Master Sgt. Stanley R. Morgan of Barrow, Alaska, was mighty proud at getting a chance to touch the soldiers' medal, the army's highest peacetime award for enlisted men, awarded his father for his refusal to leave his post as radio operator during an influenza epidemic despite his own illness. Mrs. Morgan and daughter Beverly look on. The ceremony honoring the man who also reported to the world the tragic deaths of Will Rogers and Wiley Post took place at Fort Lawton, Wash. FROM STAGE TO HOME BUDGET

A dancer and actress since childhood, 26-year-old Lois Moran, who starred in "Of This I Sing," is now the complete homemaker in her favorite role—wife of Col. Clarence Young, aviation executive and former assistant secretary of commerce. One of her biggest problems now is to balance the household budget of her San Francisco home, as shown here.
