

Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea Star in Premier at Craterian Sunday

MERLE OBERON IN CAST OF PICTURE ON SUNDAY SCREEN

The Pacific coast premiere showing of what is expected to result in being one of the year's ten best pictures, brings "These Three," starring Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea to the Craterian theatre today for a three day run.

A dramatic situation that invites raised reputations to three people, brought on by the malicious lying of a twelve-year old child, forms the motivating background for the story's plot.

The drama is laid in a small girls' school the two feminine stars have established with the aid of McCrea, as a young doctor. There the 12-year Bonita Granville (said to steal the show), a bullying child, given to glib lying to escape punishment for her vicious pranks, starts the lie that results in the three young people being ostracized by the community and becoming the center of an ugly scandal. An unexpected turn of events brings the truth to light and the story is brought to a happy conclusion.

On Wednesday only, a high speed romance carried on in a spooky atmosphere under the ever present threat of desperate gangsters and blazing guns, and leavened with side-splitting comedy situations, will bring "Seven Keys to Baldpate" to the Craterian theatre.

Gene Raymond, heading the cast as a novelist seeking a quiet place to write his book, goes to a deserted mountain inn on a midwinter night. Though he hopes to be alone, a series of unexpected and mysterious visitors arrive and his solitude is turned into a turmoil, amid which the heroine remains as baffling as the rest.

Margaret Callahan, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Eric Blore, Moroni Olsen and Grant Mitchell head the supporting cast.

of personalities and have begun to fire the squirt guns of propaganda.

"They are not the bold answers of responsible leaders expounding their point of view and offering their solutions," he said. "And slogans do not even pinch hit for facts."

He criticized an administration which seeks "a greater and greater control of the nation's thinking."

"Those who seek for power thus move easily from propaganda to raucous denunciation," he continued. "From that it is but a step to intimidation. And we witness today the seizure of private communications of innocent persons and the press. That is a gross violation of the spirit of the bill of rights."

Hoover said that 15 days before Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration he asked the president-elect to issue a statement promising a balanced budget and no currency inflation. Such a statement Hoover contended, would have averted the bank panic.

Hoover recalled that under his policies, "economic forces turned upward in July, 1932."

"Then arrived the new dealers with their point of view," he said. "There was a youngster once who told his father that the teacher wanted him to bring to school simple statements of the Einstein theory and of the new deal. Father said, 'We will begin with the Einstein theory. That is easier.'"

"Mr. Roosevelt's campaign for election was based upon the implication that the depression was caused by me personally. That is a great compliment to the energies and capacities of one man."

"From this point of observation they got the conclusion that depressions could be easily cured by the magic of spending, priming the pump, tinkering with currency and credit."

To Remain for Another Week

Due to his ever-increasing popularity, growing greater each day, the Rialto theatre has announced that Jay Clarke, who completed a full week's engagement on the stage last night, will be held over for a second week, to answer the various questions put to him concerning love affairs, business opportunities, and travel.

The screen attraction, starting today for three days at the Rialto, will have Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall co-starring in "The Lady Consents," with Margaret Lindsay and Walter Abel heading the supporting cast.

The story, sophisticated comedy punctuated with drama, shows Miss Harding as the wife who consents to giving up her husband's name to another woman until she learns that the other woman wants him, not for love, but for social position and a step-ladder to use in her seeking of social prominence. Then the wife begins a fight for possession.

artificially increasing prices. They adopted the curious concept of economy of scarcity.

"From it all they slaved down the natural forces of recovery which were in motion. And the price of that is infinite misery and anxiety to those whose jobs have been delayed."

He recalled that he had suggested "progressive solutions" to many of the nation's problems in previous speeches.

"But here let me add," he declared, "that when a man is about to drive over a precipice the first constructive suggestion is to tell him to stop."

"And I would be glad if the thinking American people would soberly consider if the Republican elephant even though he has made mistakes is not far more sure-footed toward recovery and progress than the bounding white rabbits of the new deal."

"The Country Doctor" Coming

On Thursday, the Craterian theatre will give Medford its first showing of the widely-heralded and undoubtedly the greatest attraction to be released in several years, when "The Country Doctor," featuring the Dionne Quintuplets, with Jean Hersholt in the role played in real life by Dr. Alan Dafoe, opens a three day engagement.

Personally supervised by Dr. Dafoe, "The Country Doctor," even without the Quintuplets, is said to be a remarkable story of the many obstacles that beset the professional men who accept the uncertainty of life in the rural districts and fight to do all in their power to make living more enjoyable.

The five little Dionne girls, Emelie, Yvonne, Cecile, Marie and Annette, are of course the main attractions and their childish antics in play, their everyday life in general, have proven to be the most sensational drawing card in motion pictures in recent years.
