G. C. Reed, manager of the Gainesville Telephone company, said the death toll "may be heavy." Business houses about the town square were damaged badly.

Premier Showing Craterian Drama Scores Hit Here

The Pacific Coast Premiere of "These Three," which brought Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea to the Craterian theatre yesterday, proved one of the most powerful and gripping dramas to reach the screen in many a season.

Offering all three stars the acting opportunities of their lives, based on Lillian Hellman's currently popular "The Children's Hour," which has been the subject of so much discussion in the cities where it has played, magnificently produced and expertly directed, "These Three" held last night's audience breathless from the opening shot to final fadeout.

The story, briefly, depicts how the ugly lie invented by an unruly student in a private girls' school, involving her two teachers, Miriam and Merle, and the latter's doctor fiancee, Joel McCrea, brought disaster into their lives. Due to the resultant scandal, the school is lost, the romance broken and almost unbearable suffering and humiliation is visited upon these three innocent people, before the lie is brought to light.

Others who score in the uniformly brilliant cast are Alma Kruger, as Mary's grandmother; Catherine Doucet, as the silly, trouble-making aunt; Maria Mae Jones, Carmencita Johnston, and Walter Brennan.

Unquestionably, when the laurels are passed around for the best picture of the year, "These Three" will be among those present that will win the coveted recognition.

Spook Show Coming On Holly Program

Shades of Houdini and his never to be forgotten escapes with all the nation's most noted spiritualists. Jaclar and his Midnite Spook Show have been booked for one midnite performance at the Holly theatre on Saturday night. On the same special midnite program the Holly theatre will present a thrilling new feature picture starring Karloff in "The Ghoul," secured especially for this occasion.

Houdini many years ago kept a huge standing reward for any seance that he could not duplicate. However, these contests were always settled in the privacy of the several spiritualists offices and only now has anyone ever brought the weird and ghostly business of lying and talking spirits to the American stage. Among the many baffling and astounding feats to be performed are—ghost walk, skulls that talk, bats that fly within three feet of your face and spirits that will float across your vision.

A complete one hour stage show of some of the most singular accomplishments ever seen on any stage, augmented by screen face of a high calibre in this special late show which will be at the Holly for this one late performance only on Saturday night. Because of the hair tinging thrills to be had at this extraordinary show there will be no children under sixteen years of age admitted.

Jay Clarke Opens Second Week Here Smart and sophisticated urban drama, "The Lady Consents," which started a three-day run at the Rialto theatre yesterday on the same bill with Jay Clarke, world's foremost mentalist who is starting a second sensational week on the stage with a bang, is preponderantly humorous, but is effectively touched with deeper dramatic moments.

Medford Lodge No. 83, I. O. O. F. Meets on each Tuesday, 7:30 p. m. I. O. O. F. hall, 219 W. 6th St. Members are urged to be present and visiting brothers always welcome.

Co-starring Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall, who are supported by a brilliant cast, the film is based on a novel variation of the love triangle in an intimately modern setting. Action is brisk and entertaining and the story is witty and smart.

Miss Harding finds one of her best roles as the wife who allows a cunning woman to lure away the husband to whom she is devoted. A society physician who is married to Miss Harding, Herbert Marshall, gives a splendid portrayal of a man who succumbs to the blandishments of a designing woman. Margaret Landay displays a wide versatility in her interpretation of the unscrupulous girl who doesn't hesitate to break up a happy marriage to further her own ends.

Walter Abel, Edward Ellis, Hobart Cavanaugh and Eila Chase complete the cast, one of the best assembled for a movie drama.

After careful study, the bones, obtained several years ago from a Nebraska quarry, were joined, piece by piece, until the result is believed to be fair representation of the actual animal. The work has been done by Thomas Horne, of the Smithsonian staff, under supervision of Dr. C. W. Gilmore, curator of vertebrate paleontology.

The animal, known scientifically as "Moropus Eliatus," was one of the most fantastic specimens that lived in North America during the Miocene period, the instatution said. It was somewhat larger than the plow horse of today. It had a long neck, high forequarters, a short, downward-sloping back and long, stout legs. How it was able to get its mouth to the ground to drink, due to the structure of its body, puzzles the paleontologists.

Heavy, sharp, curved claws, about 3 inches long, instead of hoofs, on all four feet, were a distinctive feature of the animal. The Moropus is believed to have lived in swampy forests, existing chiefly on twigs and leaves, which it may have dug from the ground with its claws. Its companions were members of a mammalian fauna which has been extinct for millions of years, and paleontologists believe it was the largest and probably the most feared creature of its time. The most conspicuous creatures of the period, aside from the "clawed horse" were a giant pig and a dwarf "dinoceros."

Business Protest Mixed With Humor HARRISBURG, Pa. (UP)—Unusual cases have come to light during the depression years in Pennsylvania, and despite their seriousness, some bring forth a chuckle.

The state department of internal affairs got a letter from a tailor recently complaining about poor business. He had made only 25 suits during the past year. Then he added: "In fact my vest maker is now receiving old age pension and my pants maker is on welfare."
