EUGENE, April 10.—(AP)—Captain Alby I. Eagle, retired army flier, arrested at Grants Pass a few days ago on charges of involuntary manslaughter, waived preliminary hearing in the Eugene justice court this morning and was bound over to the grand jury. Bail was set at $1500, which was furnished.

Captain Eagle is accused of causing the death of Victor Wunsch, Portland, when the Eagle car allegedly struck Wunsch as the latter was walking along the Pacific highway south of Eugene the evening of June 29, 1934.

According to information in the hands of state police, Eagle failed to stop and turned off the Pacific highway at Springfield, driving over the McKenzie pass and proceeding north to Vancouver, Wash., by way of the Wapinita cutoff.

Joseph P. Uttassy, of the whiskey Creek district in Josephine county, a passenger in the Eagle car at the time of the accident, was to have appeared as a state witness this morning, but since Eagle waived the hearing, his testimony was not taken.

SCIENCE ADVISES AGAINST MEALS LOW IN NEEDED "BULK"

Reports ALL-BRAN Supplies This Dietary Adjunct

Scientific tests have shown that meals which miss the proper "bulk" tend to cause common constipation. This condition causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, even serious disease.

Avoid these faulty meals by adding Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to your menus. It supplies generous "bulk" in convenient form. This absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is often more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables as it does not break down within the body. Two tablespoons daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN may be served as a cereal with milk or cream. Sprinkle over soups, salads or other cereals. Or work into appetizing muffins, breads, waffles, etc. It adds a delicious nut-sweet flavor to your recipes.

How much better than taking patent medicines—sometimes harmful! ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

The Story of The Easter Egg

Do you know why people color Easter eggs? Do you know the derivation of the word "Easter"?

The most ancient tribes of which there is any record celebrated the beginning of spring, and they colored eggs to express their joy in their celebrations. The way the earliest historical records refer to the custom of coloring eggs gives us good reason for believing that the custom was known before the times of recorded history.

Primitive peoples believed that the egg was a symbol of the world, and they colored it to add a touch of gaiety to their spring festivals. From the earliest sacred writings of the East there are references to eggs colored by the Persians some time between 5,000 and 10,000 years before Christ. One of the first great religious leaders of Humanity was Zoroaster, a Persian, who lived so long ago that no one knows his exact birth date. He taught his disciples that there are two gods fighting each other for possession of the world. He took the egg as a symbol of the world because the common people had already accepted it. The Persians of old, like many other pagan peoples, set aside a number of days in the early spring as public holidays for great spring festivals. They saw the days lengthening, noticed the warmth of the sun increasing, and knew at that season of the year the earth began to yield their crops. Therefore, they called the spring equinox their New Year. They expressed their joy in music, and laughter, and singing, and they tossed brightly colored eggs in the air and gave them to each other as gifts, meaning "Happy New Year." Such spring New Year festivals were common to the Assyrians, Babylonians, Egyptians, Phoenicians, Greeks, Romans and many others.

The colored egg has been traced to Abraham, and the tradition came down from the Chaldeans to the Israelites. The Chaldeans had a divinity of spring called Ishtar, and scholars have told us that the word "Easter" comes from her name. This same goddess is referred to in the Bible as Astaroth of the Phoenicians. Ancient carvings on stone represent Ishtar as holding in her hand an egg, still the symbol of the world, with an "Ishtar" rabbit crouching at her feet, as the emblem of fertility, for she was also the goddess of the principle of reproduction. Under the name of Ashtar she has been found on Assyrian monuments and was known to the Babylonians as the queen of heaven.

Maybe that is why the rabbit is associated with Easter and is how he got into the story, but hundreds of years ago children in a small province in Germany, when they found their beautiful colored eggs on Easter morning, exclaimed, "No fool ever laid such pretty eggs; the little white hare laid them." But centuries before that the Egyptians had their own idea of the hare. They believed that the nervous little animal was in some way connected with the moon. Because it frequently seeks its food by night, and because the little baby bunnies are born with their eyes open, unlike other animals, the Egyptians were sure of the relation with the moon. They called the moon the open-eyed watcher of the night skies, and in that they saw a likeness to the baby rabbits. This thought was further confirmed by the Egyptian superstition that the new moon is masculine and the waning moon feminine and the fact that the hare was believed to have the power of changing its sex. The Egyptian word for hare was "un," meaning open, to open, the opener—and so the hare was part of the festivals celebrating the opening of the new year.

With Christianity spread throughout the Western world, the early Christians avoided as many obstacles as they could in their efforts to convert the pagans. They said, in effect, "to those they hoped to persuade, 'your spring festivals are preposterous, too, rejoice in the early spring. Let us combine in this joy over the Resurrection of Christ. It is quite right for you to think of the egg as a sign of the world; see how out of such a lifeless looking thing comes life in the form of the newly hatched chick; so out of the cold rock tomb came the risen Lord. It is right for you to color your eggs bright red; red is the color of blood and can now mean to you, as it does to us, the blood shed on the cross for the redemption of all mankind.' The early Christians were good salesmen, or politicians, or what you will. At least they were tactful enough to agree to allow harmless customs and innocent festivities. For that reason the coloring of eggs, like many other pagan customs, has come down to us from the earliest times, but with a Christian significance.
