PORTLAND, Ore., April 11 - (AP)

James E. Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, told interviewers here "I don't think anything can stop a war in Europe this year. The whole thing is set for trouble."

Van Zandt, who is en route to

Japan, also said if the newly-formed Veterans of Future Wars "want to abolish war, they should join us in trying to put through congress an iron-bound, fool-proof neutrality law."

He termed the veterans of Future Wars, formed at Princeton university, "just a tool of Wall street and an offspring of the National Economic League."

"A bunch of millionaires is trying to reduce taxes and they're going about it by trying to reduce veterans' expenses."
