

BISHOP DAGWELL WILL OFFICIATE AT CONFIRMATION

The Rt. Rev. Benjamin D. Dagwell, bishop of the western Oregon Episcopal diocese, will pay his first official visit to Medford next Sunday morning when he will administer the rites of confirmation to a large class of new communicants at St. Mark's church at 11 a. m., following which he will deliver an address to the assembly. In the evening he will conduct confirmation services at St. Luke's church in Grants Pass, and Monday morning at 9:30 he will address the student assembly at the Southern Oregon Normal school. On Monday evening he will conduct confirmation services at Trinity church in Ashland.

Rev. Dagwell was consecrated bishop of this Episcopal diocese last February 12, succeeding the late Bishop Walter T. Sumner, and in the following few weeks has endeavored himself to thousands of Oregonians through his sermons and addresses. In the first six weeks after assuming the duties of bishop he delivered sixty-one sermons and addresses.

About three weeks ago the bishop made a hurried swing through the western portion of his diocese, making informal calls upon about eight parishes, Medford being among the number. He delivered a mid-week evening sermon at St. Mark's to a capacity assemblage and those who had the pleasure of meeting him and listening to his address extended congratulations to the convention that both wisely and fortunately selected Rev. Dagwell as the new bishop.

The membership of St. Mark's extends a hearty welcome to all who wish to attend next Sunday's services.
