

PLAN IS ADOPTED TO SAVE TIMBER ALONG HIGHWAY

to the forest service sufficient timber land along the highway to preserve the rustic charm of the area. In return the company would be given timber within the national forest east of the Cascade divide, Mr. Janouch explained.

The area involved lies along the Crater Lake highway between Prospect and the national forest boundary. It runs along the highway for about four and a half miles. An effort will be made to attain equal values in the contemplated exchange, Mr. Janouch said.

Experts Coming The appraisal will be in charge of Fred A. Mats of the Portland regional office. Two other expert appraisers, N. L. Wright and George E. Stevenson, will come from the Portland office Monday to get the survey started, Mr. Janouch related.

It is understood that the present plans were worked out in Washington by forest service officials and E. W. Merereau, general manager of the Regue River Timber company, which has had headquarters in Klamath Falls.

The Crater Lake highway timber tract has been a source of discussion and a bone of contention since 1932 when various organizations throughout the state, and especially in southern Oregon, started a campaign to have the land preserved by the state or the national government for its scenic charms.

Proposals Made In Past Various proposals have been made from time to time for the state or federal government to purchase the tract, or the roadside area thereof, so that the owners would not have to carry their investment as a costly and unprofitable burden.

Last fall, Mr. Janouch said, the national forest offered $30,842 for a strip of the timber land along the highway but apparently the company did not consider the offer adequate, for no response was ever made to it.

When it was reported about six weeks ago that the company had sold part of its tract and that logging operations were soon to start, many objections were made and the campaign to preserve the area was started anew.

Organizations requested Oregon senators and representatives in Washington to intercede for the preservation of the timber tract along the highway. It was then, it is understood, that Mr. Merereau went to Washington in search of an equitable plan whereby the company could surrender the land to a government agency on some equitable basis.

Mr. Janouch was of the opinion that the present negotiations would be successful.

W. W. WILLITS DIES IN SANTA MARIA

Word has been received here of the death of W. W. Willits, pioneer resident of Perist, Ore., yesterday in Santa Maria, Cal., where he was visiting his son, Merle. He had been in the south for some time but was expecting to return to his home at Perist very soon. He was about 80 years old.

Mr. Willits was one of the pioneer stockmen of southern Oregon, coming here with his three brothers when a young man. He had spent the past 50 years at his ranch at Perist, where he was a strong influence in developing schools, roads and other community enterprises.

A complete obituary will appear in a future issue. Funeral arrangements are in charge of Conger's funeral parlors and will be announced later.

HOUSE IMPEACHES U. S. JUDGE RITTER ON FINAL BALLOT

Vote Challenged. Senator Austin (R., Vt.) immediately challenged the final vote, making a point of order that Ritter could not under the law be convicted of an "outrageous" crime when he had been declared innocent of the charges separately. Austin contended such conviction, if upheld, would be "monstrous."

Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, held Austin was not in order when he began a legal argument and Senator Pittman (D., Nev.) who was presiding, upheld Robinson. Pittman then ruled Austin's point was not well taken and Austin sat down. Pittman said the last article charged "general misbehavior" and was a separate count in itself.

Ritter Unmoved. Ritter, who sat throughout the voting near the vice-president's rostrum, apparently was unmoved by the decision. The senate rejected unanimously a proposal that Ritter be deprived of life from holding any "position of trust or honor."

Ritter walked slowly from the chamber. Removing a wrapper from a cigar he remarked: "I have nothing to say. God, you can see why I have nothing to say. I'm going back to Florida." He shook his head wearily as he made this comment to reporters.

Senators McNary and Steiwer of Oregon voted for Judge Ritter's acquittal.

EX-COUNTY JUDGE DISDAINS PAROLE BARRING RETURN

Only last week, the attorney general ruled that a prisoner could not be released from prison with benefit of good behavior credits before his maximum term was served, except under parole. Since 1923 prisoners had been automatically released under those conditions without necessity of parole.

Fehl last night ordered his attorneys, H. V. Schmalz of Burns and George Rhoten of Salem, to begin habeas corpus proceedings to secure his release. Schmalz said he would be here early next week to start the action.

Test Welcomed Governor Martin reiterated his statement today he would welcome a court test of the attorney general's opinion, declaring "My purpose is to enforce the law, and I shall do so as the law is interpreted to me. I would like all doubt removed from any question."

"The attorney general," the governor continued, "is legal advisor of the state and as such is advisor to the governor as well as to any other state official. I must be guided by that advice."

The governor issued the parole late yesterday after a long conference with Ralph Moody, deputy attorney general, Warden James Lewis and with Fehl's attorneys. He said also he was guided by the recommendation of Judge G. F. Skipworth who presided at the Fehl trial.
