Mr. and Mrs. Field said they found no place to compare with southern Oregon. While away, Mr. Field attended a shoe dealers' convention in San Francisco and visited a number of shoe factories in Cincinnati and other eastern cities and inspected shoe markets throughout the east.

call back Miss Astor to the stand as a witness for Dr. Thorpe. Anderson said that in this way he would attempt to introduce in evidence Miss Astor's diary in which, Dr. Thorpe has charged, she wrote down accounts of romances with various men. These were some of the men in the life of Mary Astor: John Barrymore, Bennett Cerf, New York publisher and former husband of Sylvia Sydney, film actress; Daniel Silverberg, New York banker; Dr. Mortimer Rodgers, New York physician; Carlos Paraga, Cuban tobacco magnate; John Eldredge, actor and brother-in-law of Frederic March; Count Alfonso Cargagna and George Oppenheimer, writer.

Events occurring in Miss Astor's Tower road residence drew the interrogative fire of Dr. Thorpe's counsel for a considerable time yesterday. Q. Did anyone ever visit you at the Tower road address? A. Yes, I have a great many friends. Q. Did Mr. George Oppenheimer ever visit you? A. Yes. Q. Were Mr. Oppenheimer and yourself served drinks in the bedroom? A. No. Q. Were you and he ever in the bedroom? A. I might have taken him through while I was showing him all the rooms in the house. Q. How many times did he visit you? A. About once a week. Q. Did he ever stay all night? A. Never. Anderson asked her if she saw Dr. Thorpe and Lillian Miles together in February and March of 1935. Miss Astor said she had not.

Miss Astor has testified that Dr. Thorpe's "open association" with Mrs. Miles was a motivating factor in her suit. Anderson then queried: "Isn't it true that you have consumed one-fifth of a gallon of Scotch whiskey a day, since your divorce?" "No," said Miss Astor. President Andrew Johnson was impeached for alleged usurpation of the law, but was acquitted.

SMUGGLERS MOLL ELUDES AGENTS LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11.—(AP)—The trial of an almond-eyed Eurasian girl, key figure in a $100,000 narcotic smuggling attempt, led vexed customs agents to New York today. Half an hour after she slipped away from federal guards in a downtown hotel room, Maria Wendt boarded an air liner for Manhattan Friday night, said airport employes who identified her pictures today. The slender, tight-lipped young woman had been placed under arrest when the Japanese steamer Helyo Maru docked Tuesday from the orient and customs agents reported finding 50 pounds of narcotics in false-bottom trunks in her cabin. They declared she promised to aid them in the roundup of a smuggling ring. As a ruse to draw suspects into a trap, she was housed at a well-known hotel. Agents waited in an adjoining room. Friday night they heard her door click. She was gone.

Return Showings Thursday Feature

Motion pictures have given to the world thousands of hours of entertainment, and of the hundreds upon hundreds of films that have been made, none stand out any stronger than "The Dancing Lady" and "The Big House." Answering a call from the public for the return showing of these two fine shows, the Craterian theater will have both of them on the same program starting Thursday for a three-day engagement only. "The Dancing Lady" (left), with a cast of stars that includes Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Fred Astaire, Nelson Eddy, Franchot Tone, May Robson, Ted Healy and his three original stooges—Larry, Moe and Curly—Winnie Lightner and hundreds of others, is still one of the most remarkable musical films ever to be produced. "The Big House" (right), boasting Wallace Beery, Robert Montgomery, Chester Morris, Lewis Stone and Lella Hyams among others in featured roles, is a thrilling drama of the men in the prisons of the land. The riot in the picture, with the men led by Beery as "Hutch," a part which will long be remembered—is one of the most pulse-stirring scenes to ever reach the screen.

Here Wednesday College Farce

Uniting the popular team of Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland in another comedy farce, "Early to Bed," comes to the Craterian theater for tomorrow night—also being shown tomorrow night at the Holly. Charlie is Chester Beatty, mouseman and clerk for 26 years in the offices of the Matchless Eye company, engaged for 20 of those years to Tessie Weeks, his "Gibson Girl" sweetheart. A secret sorrow discussed mysteriously by Chester has deferred their wedding. They marry and start on their honeymoon, heading for Lake Okauchewoogee Lodge. Chester knows that the world's biggest glass-eye prospect is staying at the lodge, and he hopes to earn a bonus by landing an order. He does not know, until they arrive, that the lodge is a sanatorium. Chester reveals his secret sorrow—he is a sleep-walker, given to nightly ramblings. He has hardly confessed before a sunder and then a robbery take place, both under circumstances that make him think he has committed them in his sleep. The honeymoon, the high-pressure selling of glass-eyes and the solution of the murder mystery are scrambled into the riot of fast-moving comedy which follows.

LINDY DEMONSTRATES MECHANICAL HEART TO SCIENTIFIC CONGRESS (Continued from Page One.) Scientists had worked on the problem since 1812. The heart piston, when Col. Lindbergh became interested, was moved by magnets. He undertook to devise a more efficient "heart." In five years, scientific publications state, he made five glass hearts. Only the first and last were described. The first took its motive power from being rocked with a motion resembling the twirl of a Roman candle. The fifth used compressed air. The air drives a piston of oil. The oil in turn forces cases to drive artificial blood in and out of two connected chambers of glass. In some superficial structural aspects the Lindbergh glass heart resembles a real heart. With it, for the first time, Dr. Alexis Carrel said, scientists were able to keep whole organs of a body—heart, kidneys, spleen, thyroid, ovaries and suprarenal glands—living and growing indefinitely.
