PACKERS' STRIKE HALTS OPERATION AT 4 FRUIT SHEDS

damage for some time, allowing time for the packing houses and the packers to come to an agreement. In the four houses affected only the packers struck, the floor help and sorters remaining on duty.

There was no violence, and police were not called in, although they admitted that any attempts to destroy packing plant property would be dealt with summarily.

Packing house owners and managers met hastily this afternoon to discuss the situation and arrive at some agreement. This committee had not reached a decision this afternoon. It was understood that a few were for capitulation to the one cent bonus, while many others were in favor of cannery shipments as a way out of the dilemma if the strike should become general.

Refer said this afternoon: "I do not think this walk-out was organized by local help, who realize the situation. Outsiders, who signed up at the announced wage scale and then, under the impression that they had the growers and shippers 'over a barrel,' started the strike in hopes of cashing in on that advantage. My prediction is that the beginning of such a strike will also be the end when the workers realize the true situation. Any less occasioned by labor trouble will have to be borne by the grower, since the shippers simply can't stand it."

It was roughly estimated this afternoon that approximately 80 packers had joined in the walk-out; the ten returning to duty at the Root plant reduced that number to 70, but twice that many other workers would be affected if the plants were forced to remain closed.

Pickers also would be thrown out of work if the fruit, rapidly piling up on the shed docks, were not handled immediately. Since fruit on the dock

LIQNS TOLD AIMS BASEBALL SCHOOL

At today's luncheon meeting of the Medford Lion's club at Valentine's cafe, W. A. Frazier, well-known public accountant, was principal speaker, outlining for the group the activities and aims of the Medford baseball school for boys, which has been conducted this year under the leadership of John Miljus, former big league player.

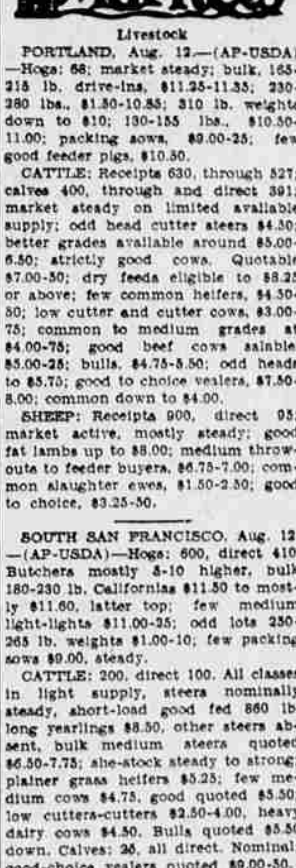

Frazier, who is one of the group of Medford business men sponsoring and taking an active interest in the school, pointed out merits of the plan, which offers splendid physical training and character building and also serves as a wholesome and valuable summer occupation for teen-age boys, whose vacation idleness might otherwise lead to harmful diversions.

The baseball school, which has enjoyed a successful inauguration this season, is considered a definite community asset by Medford business men and merchants, Frazier stated.
